Forest Expedition Reaches Dahlonega: Given Big Welcome

One of the Most Attractive Scenic Sections of Country Visited En Route to Night Stop.

PART OF EXPEDITION ON WAY TO ATLANTA

Tech Radio Outfit Already in Dahlonega When Constitution Party Reaches the Town.

BY H. H. WIMPEE.
Constitution Staff Correspondent.

Dahlonega, June 2.—(Special.)—The Constitution's forestry expedition into north Georgia arrived here at 4 o'clock this afternoon on the last lap of a trip that has penetrated one of the most attractive scenic sections of America.

The glad hand awited the little party, now composed of but four cars, and the proverbial "key to the city," was turned over to welcome invaders. The reception committee consisted of county and city officials, professional men and others. They offered the entire city—nothing was reserved. They displayed a cordiality that was vigorous and refreshing.

Leave on Return Trip.

After spending the night in Blairsville, following a day harrassed by rain and muddy roads, the beginning of the end of the Constitution's expedition started this morning. Seven of the party, including F. W. Reed, R. V. Shields, Dr. McHatton, Dr. S. W. McCallie, H. G. Spahs, H. S. Thompson and H. W. Morgan, departed for their return trip to Atlanta. They are due to arrive sometime early tomorrow.

As a further demobilization, J. A. Hollomon, Washington correspondent of the Constitution; Thomas H. McDonald, of the federal highway commission and H. B. Stone, supervising forester, composed a little party that went over into the Blood Mountain and Cooper Gap sections to view the scenery. They are expected to arrive in Dahlonega early Saturday.

This side trip was taken solely for the purpose of making a personal inspection of one of the most picturesque areas in the mountain regions of the east. Mr. Stone and Mr. McDonald were anxious to get a first-hand view and Mr. Hollomon encouraged them for he, too, wanted, a series of photos accurately portraying the beauty and grandeur of north Georgia.

Hazardous Trip.

The remainder of the party, led by the Pathfinder, began the ascent of the great hump of the chain of the Blue Ridge that separates Blairsville fram Dahlonega. It proved the most hazardous and perilous, but easily one of the most enticing trips of the entire expedition. At one time the cars moved slowly but steadily over uncertain roads at an altitude of 3,700 feet. The scene presented was one of genuine grandeur.

The distance by road between Blairsville and Dahlonega is but forty miles, but it is one of the most interesting 40-mile stretches in all America.

The people of many little towns and neighborhood settlements on the highway, like those of the score of other towns and villages through which the tourists have passed, met them with hearty handshake or cordial greetings waved from the doorways or barn lots.

One unhappy, but in nowise serious incident, occurred during the trip across the mountain. The car in which the Boy Scouts — Davis and Ford—were riding, became unruly. It went sufficiently out of commission to require the attention of trained mechanics. Consequently it was piloted over to Cleveland. The accident happened about ten miles out of Blairsville, but Cleveland was the nearer point and the Boy Scouts headed for that place. They are expected to go from Cleveland into Atlanta.

The radio car, which was left with its equipment at Clayton Thursday morning, and which was unable to get into action for thirty-six hours preceding, was in Dahlonega when the little party of four cars arrived Friday afternoon. They are all set for action, and the instruments are believed to be in proper attunement.

Welcomed to Dahlonega.

Dahlonega's welcome was enthusiastic and genuine. Mayor I. H. Baker and County Commissioner J. H. Moore were among the party that extended official welcome. Also there were Dr. Craig Arnold, J. E. Choate, F. M. Meaders, R. C. Meaders, E. F. Christian, C. B. King, George L. Pratt, Sheriff James Davis, Turner Quillia of Brookton, and numerous others.

"The city is yours; here's the red key," said Mayor Baker in effect. "If there is anything you want, ask for it; if we haven't got it right here handy, we'll import it in from Atlanta or other point. The city's yours, and you are mighty welcome."

All this was impromptu, of course. There was no formal reception. It was a happier occasion than if a programmed, made-to-order greeting had been extended. It caused Congress-

OFFICERS PLEDGE FULL CO-OPERATION TO ENFORCE LAW

Federal and State Officials Hold Conference at Georgia Bar Association Meeting.

JUDGE SIBLEY DEFENDS DRY LAWS OF COUNTRY

Z. D. Harrison, Veteran Member of Organization and Atlantan, Elected President.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Savannah, Ga., June 2.—Co-operation in law enforcement especially in prohibition and other cases where state and federal courts both have jurisdiction was pledged in resolutions adopted here today at a meeting of state and federal prosecuting officers attending the Georgia Bar association's annual convention.

The resolutions approved suggestions for such co-operation recently made in a letter from Attorney-General Daugherty and discussed before the bar association today by Judge Samuel H. Sibley of the federal court, northe a district of Georgia.

Judge Sibley took issue with the statement made yesterday by Arthur G. Powell, Atlanta, retiring president of the association, that the prohibition law has led to increased lawbreaking, and he also urged that state and federal courts should not duplicate punishment of violators.

Judge Sibley told Judge Powell that public sentiment could not be judged along Peachtree street or in Atlanta. He said to judge the feelings of the people one would have to come in contact with them in all walks of life.

"I am here in an unfortunate situation in having been told yesterday morning by Judge Powell that my life is being wholly and totally wasted, and what I am doing is so futile that it is desperate if not despicable," said Judge Sibley.

"I am going to ignore the statement because I can't answer it as it ought to be.

"I want to say that all prominent and successful statutes must be based on a real need as a remedy for a real evil supported by a real public sentiment.

"I am not here to say that it is right morally; not here to say that it is right religiously. I think the preachers and the church people are making a mistake by insisting upon that. Is it legally right? My affirmation is that prohibition is legally right. What I mean by that, is that there is a real evil experienced for generations in all countries, that calls for treatment, and very strong treatment. We have tried a great many things with only partial success. The latest experiment is nation-wide prohibition.

Legally Right.

"I say it is legally right because it has been written into the constitution of the United, and nothing can be legally wrong that is legally there. It was legally right before it was made a part of the constitution, for the reason that the supreme court of the United States, and practically every supreme court of every state in the union that ever said anything about it said it was legally right."

Judge Sibley declared that "it is our right and duty to be informed, to exercise independent, manly and courageous judgment, and to vote. But when the election is over, when the law is made according to the forms and methods we have ordained for it, we cease to be sovereign for the time being and become subjects of the only king we have—our law. When anybody is running for office, when an issue is up for a vote, we are sovereigns to say what shall or shall not be the law."

The mountaineers are beginning to take a changed view of the Volstead law, he continued, and none of them is coming back before him on a second charge.

"A man who takes an oath to uphold the constitution and laws of the United States or of the state of Georgia is nothing short of a perjurer if he does not make the best effort that is in him to observe it," he said.

Fears Bonus.

"You may say I like my drink, and there is no law against drinking. How are you going to get your drink when your supply gives out? Some persons make it and they are going to sell it to you, for they are not going to give it to you all the time. You can not escape the fact that the person who bribes the other fellow to break the law is just as guilty as the man who breaks it. And, Judge Powell, that is the trouble with the prohibition law."

In fact, behind it all is the disin-

LANDIS MAY LEAD U. S. PROSECUTION OF WAR SWINDLES

Daugherty Asks Former Federal Judge to Become His Special Assistant for Cases.

ACCEPTANCE OF JOB BY LANDIS LIKELY

Action Is Confidently Expected If Famous Patriot-Jurist Takes Helm for Government.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER.
United News Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 2.—Kenesaw M. Landis, former federal judge here and now high commissioner of organized baseball, may play a leading part in the prosecution of the government's war fraud cases as a special assistant to Attorney General Daugherty.

Landis has been offered the job, Daugherty declared here Friday, and is now considering acceptance. Daugherty believes he will accept.

Landis, if Daugherty's plans go through, will be principal figure in a new branch of the department of justice to be known as the "war contract division," which will devote itself exclusively to investigation and prosecution of alleged defrauders of the government during the war.

May Expect Action.

"I have already engaged ex-Senator Thomas, of Colorado, and Congressman Reavis, of Nebraska, and they will be part of the personnel of the new branch of the department of justice," Daugherty said.

If Landis agrees to help in going after the war-fraud cases, his friends declared, following Daugherty's announcement, the country can expect to see more action in these cases than would be likely to occur in the appointment of any other one man.

Always an implacable foe to all classes of people opposing the government's conduct of the war, the noted jurist has practically filled fort Leavenworth with war slackers, and patriotism is his ruling passion. During his long term as a United States judge here, scores of ex-service men araigned before him were treated with marked lenience upon display of honorable discharge papers from the army or navy.

Has Had Conference.

Major Reed Landis, the Judge's son, was an ace in the air service during the war, and Landis has been extremely bitter against those who, he thought, failed to do their part in the war.

In addition to Landis, Daugherty said, he is also trying to get Francis E. McGovern, former governor of Wisconsin, and one of the most prominent lawyers in that state, to act in a similar capacity.

"Some time ago," Daugherty said, "I had a conference with Judge Landis in Washington. While he gave me no definite answer, I am convinced that he looks upon my proposition favorably and that he will be

PROSPERITY WEEK EVENTS POSTPONED

Big Attractions Will Be Presented Next Week, However, Beginning on Wednesday.

Postponement of the remaining features of the Progress and Prosperity week celebration until next Wednesday as announced Friday will enable the producers to present some of the biggest and best attractions in more complete detail than originally planned it was stated Friday afternoon by R. M. Striplin, general chairman. The final event of this week's program was a combination parade of Ford cars and "old-time" automobiles staged on the down town streets Friday morning.

Bad weather prevailed Wednesday and Thursday and made it impossible to present th ebig feature attractions including the Venetian water carnival and dance festival and it was decided that a postponement until next week would enable the committee to show these attractions as they ought to be shown and at the same time enable the people to make the trip to Lakewood park in comfort.

Shift Made in Events.

Chairman Striplin announced that the program would be picked up next Wednesday where it was left off last Wednesday. A shift will be made, however, which will allow the Atlanta Advertising club to present its exposition Wednesday night instead of Saturday night. This change was made so that the Advertising club can make its trip to Milwaukee which was planned several weeks ago. Included in the Advertising club's exposition will be a fashionable horse show.

Cheyenne Kiser's Rodeo will be

Constitution Will Transmit Concert To Piedmont Sunday

Step Will Extend Scope for Municipal Organ Recitals Now Given at the Auditorium.

EIGHT ORGAN NUMBERS WILL BE PRESENTED

In Addition to These Selections, There Will Be French Horn Solos and Three Voice Numbers.

Sunday will mark a new scope for Atlanta's Sunday afternoon municipal organ recitals by Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., city organist, when The Constitution will inaugurate the transmission of these Sunday afternoon concerts to Piedmont park. The municipal organ recital will be augmented by French horn and voice numbers, and beginning at 3:30 o'clock will last about an hour and a half.

Three audiences will be reached by the weekly municipal concert.

First, there will be the Auditorium, where each Sunday Mr. Sheldon presents his organ recital. Recently the Auditorium has been closed on Sundays to permit remodeling to go on uninterrupted.

Then there will be a great audience at Piedmont park. A loud speaker which was installed by The Constitution's radio service will make it possible for thousands to listen to the music as transmitted from the Auditorium.

Finally there will be the audience of unnumbered radio enthusiasts who were first given the municipal organ recital two months ago by The Constitution.

Eight Organ Numbers.

The regular recital for Sunday will consist of eight numbers. In addition to these selections on the city organ—the only instrument of its kind in the south—will be several French horn solos by E. A. Helton, and three voice numb... by Jack R. Hornady, both of whom have been heard in concerts given by The Constitution radio service.

It was five weeks ago that The Constitution first announced its plan to present the municipal organ recital at Piedmont and Grant parks during the summer. The Grant park apparatus will be installed soon. In the meantime thousands can hear each week the organ recital at Piedmont park jlust as though they were in the Auditorium where the organ is located.

For five weeks technical experts who are attached to The Constitution radio service have been experimenting, and have perfected the devices by which the municipal concerts will be given at Piedmont park.

New Era in Entertainment.

Inauguration of this enterprise by The Constitution marks a new era in municipal entertainment. Members of the city park board were highly enthusiastic over the project when it was first outlined to them by The Constitution. They saw in the plan the opportunity for thousands to receive the Sunday afternoon organ recitals by Mr. Sheldon in the open air.

Mr. Sheldon, who was the first to suggest such a plan, was jubilant Friday over the success with which tests have been carried out with the apparatus to be put in actual use Sunday. Several times during the last week

POWELL'S ATTACK ON DRY STATUTES WARMLY SCORED

Leaders in Prohibition Movement in State Make Answer to Recent Speech in Savannah.

ENCOURAGES "TIGERS," SAYS JESSE MERCER

Judge Powell's Utterances on Prohibition Situation "Utter Absurdity," Says Mrs. Dillard.

The declaration of Judge Arthur G. Powell before the Georgia Bar association in convention at Tybee Thursday, that prohibition has proved a failure Friday drew fire from Colonel Jesse E. Mercer, secretary of the Georgia league for law enforcement. Judge W. R. Hammond and Mrs. Leila A. Dillard, president of the Georgia Woman's Chirstian Temperance untion.

Colonel Mercer addressed a letter to Judge Powell expressing intense surprise at the speech of the latter, adding that it was "powerful in its destructive influence on the public welfare."

"Every informed man knows," he declared, "that only crass ignorance of the real truth about prohibition can save you from the charge of willingness to humor the most dangerous of the lawless elements in this country, the bootlegger. Every lawbreaker will take courage at your utterance. He will carry the published report of your speech in his pocket, reserving another pocket for the pistol he is encouraged by your language to use on the first officer of the law who attempts to interfere with his 'constitutional rights' to violate the constitution of his country.

"You were sewing dragon's teeth at Tybee, sewing them in Georgia soil. I deplore your entire speech for your sake and the great harm it will do."

Judge Hammond's Statement.

Judge Hammond, who prior to his retirement from active practice, was one of the ablest and best known lawyers of the state, flatly refuted Judge Powell's statement, while Mrs. Dillard declared that such an utterance as that of Judge Powell's forced the womanhood of Georgia to voice protest against an "utter absurdity."

"I desire to voice my indignant protest against the published statement of Judge Powell before the Georgia Bar association to the effect that the prohibition law has been a failure," declared Judge Hammond. "In my own opinion, it has proven itself one of the grandest successes this country has ever seen. If Judge Powell will study the statistics bearing on the matter he will change his mind—and he ought to do so and say so.

"Had I been present at the meeting of the state bar association, I would have voiced my protest then and there."

Mrs. Dillard's Statement.

The reply of Mrs. Dillard to Judge Powell's statement is as follows:

"We members of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, would much prefer following the even tenor of our way, doing patient, constant, constructive work, remembering the admonition of our great leader, Frances Willard, who said we must 'Be as good natured as sunshine, as steadfast as gravitation, and as persistent as a Christian's faith,' but when a man in a responsible position in our state, and as well known as Judge Powell, makes such statements as are reported in the newspapers in his speech before the Georgia Bar association at Tybee Island, June 1, we feel like we can no longer keep silent.

"Judge Powell is reported to have said, in attacking the prohibition law, that it is his 'calm, deliberate judgment that no enactment of such widespread, vicious, universally debasing effect on our law and the enforcement of it, of such potency in arousing disrespect for the law and the courts, has ever before been imposed upon our people.'

"It is hard to even imagine a man of his intelligence making such a declaration, especially when the vast host of the best citizens, not only of the whole state and nation disagree with him, but even in his own city.

Indorsed Prohibition.

"Not long ago, Dr. Robert Hercod, of Luzanne, Switzerland, visited Atlanta for the purpose of observing at first-hand the effect of prohibition. His tour of the United States was to get facts to refute just such statements by the European press as were made by Judge Powell.

"A banquet was given him at the

SURVEY ORDERED OF PETERS STREET

Movement Is Started to Widen and to Repave Thoroughfare—Fund Is Appropriated.

At the request of property owners and other citizens interested in a movement to widen and repave Peters street, the street committee of council Friday afternoon ordered a survey made of the street to determine the extent and cost of the work.

The task of making the survey will be turned over to Robert H. Whitten, consultant, and engineers of the city planning commission, and the members consented to contribute $50 each of their streets' ordinary fund to employ whatever field help the engineers may need.

Peters street intrsects Whitehall street in West End, and terminates near the Terminal station, where the new Spring Street viaduct is to land. George West, who spoke for the citizens urging the improvement, pointed out that with the erection of the viaduct Peters street will form the link of another artery that will be traversed by through traffic north and south.

Will Aid Traffic.

He said that Peters street does not cross a railroad at grade and that

HUSBAND-SLAYER ASSAILS VICTIM IN SORDID STORY

Mrs. Cora Lou Vinson Says She Was Determined No Other Woman Should Have Him.

MADE HER DOPE FIEND, CHARGES DEFENDANT

Declares He Was Cruel to Her, Abused Her, and That She Shot to Save Her Own Life.

A story of cruel treatment which lasted over a period of 19 years, and was only ended when she shot her husband, Dr. W. D. Vinson, March 50, at a drug store on Marietta street after he had told her "he was going to marry a younger woman as he was tired of an hysterical old woman like me," was told Friday by Mrs. Cora Lou Vinson, on trial in Fulton superior court for murder.

The gruesome details of their home life in all its alleged sordidness was related by the defendant who declared that her husband had made a confirmed dope fiend out of her, and had given her a social disease which had been passed on to her daughter.

Mrs. Vinson also charged Dr. Vinson with malpractice, charging that on five different occasions he had forced her to become his victim. Despite all this, however, she asserted, she loved her husband and begged him to live with her "uprightly for the sake of the children."

Then She Fired.

"I told him I would fight him to the end and if I couldn't have him nobody else could. Then I thought he was going to shoot for he pulled his coat over so that I saw the butt of his pistol, and I just shot, but I don't remember anything else until after I got into the car again. I don't ever remember shooting him again. I don't remember anything after I shot once." And now it is up to the jury, and my God, to let me go back home and let me try to raise my little children."

Witnesses were put on the stand by the state who swore that Mrs. Vinson had stated previous to the killing that she had contracted the disease from a former husband. Other witnesses put up in rebuttal denied the statements made by Mrs. Vinson.

Her Daughter Faints.

Just when Mrs. Vinson got to the point in her narrative when she shot her husband, one of her daughters by another marriage, toppled off a chair in a faint on the floor, and was carried out. Her mother did not appear to be disturbed and she continued her statement, referring to her voluminous notes which she used during her statement.

A tilt between counsel for the state and the defense in which Attorney Sam Hewlett for the defense was reprimanded for his attitude to the court, came during the rebuttal testimony of C. C. Cowan, a grocer, and was directly the result of Judge John D. Humphries' fining Judge Newt Morris, counsel for the defense, at the morning session.

"Haven't you got those bills to show what you say you sold to Dr. Vinson, and delivered at his house," Judge Morris asked the witness.

"No sir," replied the witness, "when the groceries are delivered and paid the customers get the receipt and Mrs. Vinson got them." Solicitor Boykin, who was looking through some papers on his desk, said in an aside, to the lawyers at the other table, "your client has got them, if you wanted them why don't you ask her for them."

Attorney Hewlett jumped to his feet, "your honor, you ought to fine the solicitor-general for contempt of court, you fined another attorney for that this morning," he said.

Hewlett Listened.

"Mr. Hewlett," stated Judge Humphries, "your remarks are entirely uncalled for and out of order. The court fined an attorney this morning for disrespect to the court and not for remarks passed back and forth by the attorneys. If there were fewer remarks between the attorneys it would suit the court much better."

In telling her story, which had no continuity, Mrs. Vinson accused her husband of intimacy with another woman, at the time her oldest child, Mrs. Pauline Brown, was a baby. When she accused him she said, he said he would choke her to death one night and nobody would know about it.

Other Woman Comes In.

"Then at another time several years ago, I found out that he was buying groceries for another woman, and when I accused him, he told me if I would forgive him, he would deed me the place. And I did, and he made me a deed to the place which I was to have at his death. I didn't get anything from it before he died, only after he died, it was to come to me."

"I used to curry his horse, and wash the horse and his buggy, and Dr. Vinson never washed his feet the whole time he lived with me. I loved him so much I always washed his

GEORGIA'S COTTON CROP FAR BELOW TEN-YEAR AVERAGE

Atlanta Government Bureau Releases Detailed Report on Conditions Throughout State.

71 PER CENT OF NORMAL IS FIGURE FOR STATE

Prices Advance After Estimate of 69.6 for Entire Country Is Issued in Washington.

BY MARION KENDRICK.

Georgia's cotton crop is far below the ten year average and its condition would be worse were it not for the generally good situation in the southern third of the state, declared the United States bureau of markets and crop estimates in its bulletin Friday night in placing the condition at 71 per cent of normal. The detailed report of the Atlanta office was issued after the Washington department had released its estimate of 69.6 per cent for the entire country.

One of the most significant features of the Georgia bulletin is the statement which calls particular attention to the fact that the report applies to conditions as of May 25, and declares "much water has gone over the dam since then." The report also states that weevils are attacking cotton in every section of Georgia, and terms the situation as "extremely serious."

Prices Advance.

The bureau report for the country at large was 1.4 per cent higher than the average of private reports. Both New York and New Orleans markets sold off before and immediately after it was issued, but rallies soon became effective. New York's close was at a net advance of 31 to 39 points, while New Orleans' last quotations represented gains of 34 to 39 points net.

Atlanta spot middling jumped 35 points to 20.85, a new high. New York middling was at 21.35. New Ormleans middling remained unchanged at 20.50.

It should be noted that strength in the markets after the bureau report was made public, was attributed to the general belief that estimates had been discounted earlier in the week, when heavy selling was in effect, and to recent excessive rains in the cotton belt.

Georgia's condition figure of 71 per cent compares with 63 in 1921; 55 in 1920; 81 in 1919; 78 in 1917, and 69 in 1917. The condition this year is fifth lowest in the belt.

Southern Section Best.

"The Georgia cotton condition is very much below the ten year average. It would be extremely low, were it not for the generally good situation in the southern third of the state," reads the Georgia Bulletin. "A clear iden of the cotton situation this month can best be obtained by dividing the state into four zones.

"In the north zone, above a line running from Hart county to Haralson county, the condition is generally fair, above 70. The next belt to the

THREE ARE HURT IN TWO ACCIDENTS

Robert Beuchler and Companion Are Injured When Automobile Is Hit by Wagon.

Three persons were hurt in accidents occurring Friday.

Robert Beuchler, of 927 North Boulevard, and a companion, Walter Trippe, address not given, were painfully cut and injured about 10:50 o'clock Friday morning when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a wagon driven by a negro woman, Ruth Bell, at Juniper and Seventh streets. Both were given medical treatment at the home of C. H. Beuchler, father of Robert Beuchler. A case of reckless driving was made against the negro woman by Patrolmen Andrews and Whatley, who investigated the accident.

George Roach, negro employee of the Birmingham Packing company, was injured about noon Friday when struck by a Soldiers' Home street car of the Georgia Railway and Power company in front of 138 Kennedy street. The negro was given medical watches, urgin gthem to do their ut-

Senate Attaches Amendment Providing $7,500,000 for Project to Army Appropriation Bill.

IF HOUSE ACCEPTS, WORK BEGINS SOON

Would Continue Construction Work on Dam Number Two—Only Few Votes of "No."

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, June 2.—The senate late today voted to continue construction work on dam No. 2 of the Muscle Shoals federal power project and attached to the army appropriation bill an amendment appropriating $7,500,000 for the purpose. As the amendment has not been agreed to yet by the house, it must go to conference for adjustment and if accepted by the house work will be begun within thirty days.

The action of the senate, Chairman Norris of the agriculture committee explained, does not involve in any way the negotiations for the sale or lease of the great power project. He told the senate, in presenting his amendment, that no decision had been reached as to the government's policy but declared it would be "an economic crime" to delay further the work on dam number two.

Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, the republican leader, objected to consideration of the amendment under the rules governing disposition of an appropriation measure but after a preliminary wrangle, he withdrew his point of order and the amendment was agreed to with only a scattering of "no" votes.

Charges Antipathy to Ford.

Presentation of the amendment threatened to reopen the whole Muscle Shoals question which has been before congress or some of its committees almost without a break since late in the war with Germany.

Senator Williams, democrat, Mississippi, however, was the only one actually to discuss the broader phase and he did so, he said, because he regarded the discussion as the "opening skirmish, the firing on the picket line" in the question of whether the government should lease or sell the property or develop it itself. Mr. Williams dealt at some length on what he described as the "republican antipathy" for the offer of Henry Ford and asserted that the controversy over the Ford offer with the consequent delay was because Mr. Ford had once run for the senate as a democrat.

"I charge here," the Mississippi senator continued, "that the only reason the Ford proposition, either the original or the present one and it is more in favor of the government than the first, has not been accepted is because the majority of both houses of congress are republicans and Mr. Ford is not. There seems to be something of a private understanding that Mr. Ford is not to be permitted to make any money out of anything connected with the government."

Efforts to Junk Project.

Mr. Williams declared he had never seen a parliamentary objection employed except as a means of defeating a proposal and he characterized the effort to hold off the amendment on Muscle Shoals as such.

It was another evidence, he said, of republican effort to junk the whole project but expressed the hope that the future would see the river harnessed to the fullest advantage of the nation.

Senator Underwood, of Alabama, the democratic leader, mentioned the Ford offer also, saying that if it were submitted he would vote for it but that that phase was aside from the question at hand, which he described as whether the government should throw millions of dollars in the Tennessee river to sink or to make the project a national asset.

"It is a question," he said, "whether we desire to have the government waste the time and waste the money it has put in or to complete the project and get as much out of it as is possible. Completed, it is a national asset; uncompleted, absolute loss."

Mr. Norris said the agriculture committee had believed in submitting the amendment it was working to the best interest of the government and explained that the appropriation of $7,500,000 was all that was immediately involved inasmuch as the machinery, equipment and men were already on the ground.

Every engineer who has investigated the project, he said, agreed that even though the permanent policy in respect to the properties was "up in the air," the Wilson dam should be completed. It could not affect in any way the discussions or negotiations for the sale or lease, he explained, except that cognizance would have to be taken of the additional money put into the project.

The amendment was given the support of Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin, also, although he said he had opposed further expenditures on the plant previously. His earlier objection, he said, was based on the belief that the Alabama Power company would be able to use the power developed but declared he was convinced now that an ample market was available.

COMMITTEE WORKS ON FORD OFFER.

Washington, June 2.—(By the Associated Press.)—Work of reconciling differences in language contained in the plan approved by the house military committee for development by private enterprise of the government's projects at Muscle Shoals, Ala., and the language used by Henry Ford in expressing the terms of his offer, was renewed today by the committeemen in session with W. R. Mayo and J. W. Worthington.

Upon the efforts of the conferees to work out an agreement satisfactory to the two parties involved, the fate of Mr. Ford's proposal depends in so far as its favorable or unfavorable submission by the committee to the house is concerned. First discussions centered upon the fertilizer provisions of the committee's plan as compared to that rewritten by Mr. Ford in Detroit and submitted to the committee yesterday by Mr. Worthington.

No progress was made at the morning meeting to harmonize the two paragraphs relating to fertilizer manufacture at Muscle Shoals. The discussions were renewed later in the afternoon when the conferees met informally for the second time. Their plan contemplated a joint rewriting of the provisions which could be communicated to Mr. Ford and his attitude ascertained in a way to permit a report to be made before the committee at its formal session tomorrow.

The second point of controversy between the committee and the motor manufacturer involving the Gorgas steam plant, awaited disposition of the fertilizer question. That was not mentioned at the conferences today, it was understood, but would be considered later.

Would 'Railroad' Youth to Prison, Watson Charges

Washington, June 2.—Charges that an attempt was being made to "frame up" and "railroad" to prison Andrew T. Durbin, of Columbus, Ohio, son of William Durbin, democratic state chairman of Ohio, for having given information regarding acts of Attorney-General Daugherty and Thomas B. Felder, New York attorney, were made in the senate late today by Senator Watson, democrat, Georgia.

Senator Watson made his charges shortly after young Durbin, arrested here Saturday on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses from a Washington hotel had been ordered held by District Attorney Presmont for preliminary hearing June 7. Attorney Presmont stated that extradition of Durbin to Ohio had been requested, a similar charge having been placed against him in Cleveland.

On Old Charge.

Senator Watson without mentioning the Durbin case except by inference, declared the youth was arrested by a Burns detective fifteen minutes after leaving his, Senator Watson's office on a check forgery charge which the senator said was a year and a half old. Young Durbin, Senator Watson said, had informed him regarding an alleged release by the attorney general of the British steamer J. M. Young, at New York after seizure in violation of the prohibition laws.

"This is just strong arm methods, Burns methods," declared Senator Watson.

"The country will question this sudden rebirth of an old case so soon after he had been in a senator's office. Can the attorney general remain silent after this? Do the men think public sentiment of the country can be defied?

Burns Refutes Charge.

William J. Burns, chief of the department of justice's bureau of investigation, said after hearing of the Georgia senator's charges that he could say positively there was no connection with Durbin's arrest and any visit to Senator Watson's office. He added that the department of justice had only recently learned of the arrest of the Ohio man.

In continuing his address Senator Watson assailed Mr. Daugherty again for his connection with the pardoning of Charles W. Morss, New York banker, from Atlanta penitentiary in 1912.

Again mentioning no names the senator said Mr. Daugherty had recommended clemency in the case of the multi-millionaire, who, the senator declared, had been found guilty of misconduct with a fifteen year old girl.

Senator Watson also referred to the house action on the resolution to investigate the department of justice which said "choked down."

URGE WOODWARD FOR MAYORALTY

Rumors were persistent at city hall Friday that James G. Woodward, several times mayor of Atlanta, will be a candidate in the forthcoming mayoralty fight.

Mr. Woodward told a reporter seeking verification of the reports, that requests have come from more than 1,000 people within the past two months urging him to make the race.

"I have been tossing my hat into the ring for thirty years," said Mr. Woodward. "Every time I have asked for the peoples' help they have been very kind to me.

"I shall not go out tossing my hat into the ring this time, but should citizens of Atlanta in sufficient number name me as their choice, ask for my help and demand of me that I make the race, I feel that I would be compelled to give their request consideration."

Other developments of the political situation Friday were announcements by six members of city council that they will step down at the end of their terms.

Those who say they will not offer for re-election are Alderman Charles L. Chosewood, Councilman J. R. Nutting, Councilman Claude Ashley, Alderman Harry Goodhart, Councilman R. E. Stone, Councilman W. P. Anderson and Councilman Walter A. Sims.

Alderman Chosewood also set at rest rumors that he would be a candidate for city chief of construction. "I don't intend to run for anything," he said.

Councilman Edgar Watkins announced Thursday that he intends to resign his place in time for his successor to be elected at the forthcoming primary.

Federal Road Aid For Coming Year Is $50,000,000

Washington, June 2.—The deadlock over federal good roads aid between the senate and the house was broken today when their conferees reached a compromise by which $50,000,000 will be available during the next fiscal year for continuing federal and state co-operation in road development.

No direct appropriations are made under the completion, but the secretary of the treasury is given authority to allot the $50,000,000 fund and make contracts with the state up to that figure, such contracts to be obligations upon the government.

The conferees dropped the senate provisions to appropriate $65,000,000 next year for road funds and $75,000,000 for the succeeding year. These appropriations are to be fixed in subsequent appropriation measures.

SORDID STORY TOLD BY MRS. VINSON

feet for him." Here the defendant wept for several seconds.

"Four years ago he started going with another woman, then he told me I used to be a good-looking woman, but I wasn't now, that a woman at my age wasn't any good to a man, and he was going to get a younger woman. He told me I was a fool to try to hang on to him and that if I had any sense I'd let him alone and let him go, that he didn't love me, and didn't want me, but I loved him so much, he was so handsome.

"Threatens to Kill Me."

"He threatened to kill me one time, shot at me and just missed my baby's head. He gave me so much dope he had made a dope fiend out of me before I knew it. He gave me dope for two years before I knew it, and when he left me the last time I was a dope fiend.

"He only bought me three or four dresses and four suits, and not a decent suit of underwear the whole time we were married, 19 years."

"Now as to the way I happened to have the pistol," she said as she recounted the story of the slaying. "Dr. Vinson borrowed the pistol from a man named Collum, I think, and I hid it to keep him from killing my brother. I slipped it into my pocket when I started out of the house the night of the killing. I had had the toothache all day so I tied my head up in a veil and called for Mr. Mann to come and drive me to Dr. Vinson's office. When I got there I sent the little girl in to find out if he was there, and as he had not come in, I waited in the automobile until he arrived. Then I went in and asked him if he would send Dr. Baird to see me. He said he would.

"Then I asked him if he would go upstairs with me and see about having my teeth worked on. He said nothing. Then I asked him to drop the divorce suit on account of our children, and he said for me to shut up and that he was going to get a divorce.

Says She Saw Gun.

"I asked him if he was going to marry and he said he was, and then pulled back his coat and I saw the butt of his pistol and knew he was going to shoot. I could not run, I was so close to him, so I just pulled my pistol and shot, and that's all I remember until I got out into the car. I've been through so much and he has treated me and the children so badly and his brother, Dr. George Vinson, has called me awful names over the telephone and cursed me and said my children were illegimate. I just couldn't stand it."

Dr. Baird was the first witness called by the state in rebuttal. He stated that Dr. Vinson had asked him to see Mrs. Vinson and that two years ago he saw her on several occasions, and that she told him she had contracted a disease from a former husband He said that he did not take the case and had never treated her, but that just before the shooting he was called by Dr. Vinson and went to see the defendant and she made the same statement to him.

Dr. Auten Testifies.

Dr. Auten was called and testified that Mrs. Vinson had stated to him that Dr. Vinson had never laid the weight of his hand on her and that "any man who did would get brained."

Rev. W. H. Boring, pastor of St. James Methodist church, related an incident in 1919 when he went with Dr. Vinson to see Mrs. Vinson in an effort to effect a reconciliation between them. At that time the trouble was over some property, he said, and Mrs. Vinson said she would take Dr. Vinson back if he would deed over his property to her.

Mrs. W. E. Smith, a grocer, and C. C. McCowan testified that Dr. Vinson ran grocery bills averaging $95 a month at their stores.

W. J. Hardy, of the Haverty Furniture company, testified that he had sold Dr. Vinson a suit of furniture for $527, which the doctor said was to be a wedding present to his daughter, Mrs. Brown. The state said this was introduced to show that Dr. Vinson was good to his family and a good provider.

Dr. G. T. Pearce, in whose drug store the killing took place, testified that Louie, the youngest child, had been living at the Williams House with his father for a year before the shooting.

Dr. George Vinson Called.

Dr. George Vinson was the last witness called Friday night. He declared that the story told by Mrs. Vinson in regard to the treatment alleged to have been accorded Mrs. Vinson by himself and his brother was absolutely false.

The case will be resumed at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. The state has not concluded its rebuttal testimony, and each side will be given two hours for argument. The case will probably get to the jury some time Saturday afternoon.

The state is represented by Solicitor-General John A. Boykin and the law firm of Branch & Howard. Mr. Howard questioned the witnesses during the afternoon session.

The defense is represented by Judge Newt Morris and Attorney John Dorsey, of Marietta and Sam Hewlett and Joe Ewing.

Fined for Contempt.

A fine of $50 was imposed on Judge Newt Morris, leading counsel for the defense, by Judge Humphries for alleged heckling of Dr. W. J. Auten, a state's witness, under cross-examination. Judge Morris paid the fine, but asserted that he would enter proceedings to have it refunded.

Judge Humphries overruled a motion by Judge Morris to declare a mistrial after an affidavit by the slain man had been admitted into evidence. The affidavit was made by Mr. Vinson in connection with divorce proceedings filed shortly before he was shot by Mrs. Vinson.

The attorney for the defense argued that the affidavit was not admissible because it was, in effect, permitting a husband to testify against his wife in a criminal proceeding, and because Dr. Vinson could not be cross-examined in regard to the testimony contained in the affidavit.

Charges that Mrs. Vinson repeatedly had threatened his life, that on one occasion she had kicked him down the stairs at their home, 55 Ponders avenue; that on another occasion she entered his office with a pair of iron tongs and attempted to strike him on the head, and that at another time she attacked him in a downtown drug store while he was talking to friends and kicked him into the street, were contained in the affidavit.

Dr. Vinson further declared in the affidavit that he and his wife had little trouble as long as all property in his possesion was deeded to her, but that when he would purchase a new piece of property and not immediately deed it to her, trouble often would ensue.

Jealousy was implied as the motive for the shooting in the testimony of Dr. Auten, county physician, who attended the accused woman in jail after she was first arrested and to whom, he says, she talked freely.

"Mrs. Vinson told me she went to the Pierce drug store that afternoon to see Dr. Vinson and that he told her he was getting a divorce from her and was through with her," Dr. Auten said. "She said he told her he was going to marry a younger woman and that he was tired of her being sick and nervous all the time. When he told her that, she told me she drew her pistol and shot him."

Dr. Auten said she had not mentioned seeing Dr. Vinson with a pistol at any time since he had been attending her. He said he had known her for a number of years and had treated her often.

"One time I treated Dr. Vinson for a scratch on his cheek which he said his wife had caused," he continued. "I went to the house and Mrs. Vinson told me she had scratched him and had called him a 'hound,' after which she attempted to push him off the porch. She said he was no good and was too old and that he didn't have any consideration for her."

Dr. Auten added that Mrs. Vinson had come to a drug store which he formerly operated and purchased two ounces of paregoric each day, which he said she drank.

Witnesses on Stand.

Other witnesses were Clifford King, drug clerk, who says he saw Mrs. Vinson attack her husband in the Brannon drug store and kick him; Mrs. E. L. Osburn, who lives across the street from the Vinson home on Ponders avenue, and who testified that she had been called to the Vinson home the night before the shooting in the capacity of trained nurse, and had found Mrs. Vinson in an ill humor because her efforts to be admitted to the state insane asylum had been frustrated, she said, by Dr. Vinson; and Luther Jackson, nephew of Mrs. Vinson, who testified that she had said she would kill her husband and his two sons to prevent them from getting control of his property.

Dr. George A. Vinson, brother of the slain man, testified that he had heard Mrs. Vinson threaten the life of her husband once and on another occasion had heard her declare that she "would maul hell out of him."

Condition of Georgia Cotton Crop

The above chart was prepared by Z. R. Pettett, chief statistician of the United States bureau of markets and crop estimates, Atlanta.

Washington, June 2.—Conditions of cotton on May 25 was 69.6 per cent of a normal, compared with 66.0 last year, 62.4 in 1920, 75.6 in 1919 and 74.6 the ten-year average, the department of agriculture announced today in its first condition report of the season.

A forecast of production was not issued, but will be announced with the first estimate of cotton acreage in July.

GEORGIA COTTON CROP FAR BELOW AVERAGE

south, extending down to a line from Augusta to LaGrange, is in bad shape, with condition figures from forty to seventy. Cotton late, grassy, sick.

"South of this is another narrow belt where cotton is doing fairly well with a general average above seventy, about as usual. The fourth and extreme southern belt has enjoyed good cotton weather, the crop is early there, plenty of fertilizer was used, and cotton is clean, healthy and putting on fruit. Condition is above 80, and runs almost to normal in some counties.

"The government report applies to the date of May 25 and much 'water has gone over the dam' since then. It is also extremely important to know that the figure given, 71 per cent of normal, indicates merely the physical condition of plant on specified date. The universal infestation by weevil, the wetness of soil, promise of abundant grass, are all factors which must be considered but which will not show until the official quantitative report is issued in July. Warning is given against attempt to interpret the May report in terms of final production. This can not be done in states newly devastated by weevil.

"Especial attention is invited to the numbers of weevils present in every county. Where squares are forming they are being attacked immediately. Where cotton is late they are feeding on the terminal bud. The situation is extremely serious and merits the thoughtful consideration of every citizen of the state," the report stated.

ARMY MONEY BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

Washington, June 2.—Carrying an appropriation of $341,750,000, the annual army appropriation bill was passed late today by the senate. It fixes the size of the army for the next year at an average of 12,530 officers and 133,000 men.

Passage of the bill, which was without a record vote, followed quickly after a test vote by which the senate accepted, 49 to 21, its committee's action increasing the house figure on the size of the army from 115,000 to 133,000 enlisted men. The strength of 12,530 officers compares with 11,000 as voted by the house.

one of the special prosecutors representing the government when the cases come to trial.

Wants Best Minds.

"The undertaking of prosecuting was frauds will be one of the greatest, if not the greatest tasks, ever confronting the department of justice.

"I have engaged fifty rooms in a building in Washington to house the investigators, indictment experts and prosecutors. There were more than 150,000 contracts entered into by the war department alone. Those transactions are being raked over now, and as fast as discrepancies are found, cases are prepared.

"I am after the biggest and best legal minds in the country. These cases are going to be tried and pushed to the limit, and the best men in the country are required to try them."

Judge Landis is resting at Burt Lake, Mich.

PROSPERITY WEEK EVENTS POSTPONED

presented every afternoon at 3 o'clock beginning next Wednesday. This attraction was held over for a week and is one of the most popular in the series of entertainments. Next Thursday and Friday nights the Venetian water carnival and the dance festival staged jointly by the Lions' club and the Civitan club will be offered.

The diving girl exhibition, a second performance of "The Mikado," moving pictures and fireworks will round out the program next week.

Parade is Held.

The Ford parade, originally scheduled for Wednesday and the old-timers automobiles parade, scheduled for Thursday which were postponed because of heavy rains, were combined Friday morning and attracted much attention when the automobiles moved through the principal down town streets at 10 o'clock.

There were Fords of every conceivable size, shape, form, fashion, type, model, and Fords in almost every stage of disintegration. There were new Fords and old Fords, dressed up Fords, disguised Fords, stripped Fords, cut-down, Fords, Fords with brass fronts, nickeled fronts, red, white and blue fronts. All were running, some were rattling and some puffing. One of the Fords was assembled in Atlanta 30 minutes before the parade while another was one of the original models out of the first Ford shop at Detroit.

Among the "old-timers" were Mercedes, Buicks, Speedwells, Overlands, Fords, Cadillacs, Oaklands, Packards, E. M. F's., Flanders, Studebakers, Reos, Oldsmobiles, Dodges, Maxwells, Chalmers, Franklins, Hudsons, and other makes in the parade.

A. L. Belle Isle was chairman of the Ford parade and E. F. Ulmer and Sam Porter were chairmen of the old-timers parade.

Chairman Striplin announced that the prices next week would be 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children. A ticket admits the holder to all the special attractions. No charge will be made for grandstand seats.

RAIN AND THE TOUR.

In one way the excessive rainfall that has featured the current tour of the Nantahala and Cherokee national forest reserves under the auspices and personal direction of The Constitution has been unfortunate and regrettable; in another, it has not.

It has necessarily detracted from the pleasure of the tourists and added to their hardships; but at the same time these very hardships and the unpleasantness occasioned by unfavorable weather must have served as an object lesson to impress upon the minds of the tourists the need for just such development as that of which this tour is intended to be the forerunner.

The primary objects of the expedition are, first, to acquaint the government officials making the tour with the scenic beauty, rugged grandeur and the dormant possibilities of the region traversed; second, to give them an opportunity to form a conclusion, in the light of first-hand experience, as to the wisdom and necessity of making that region accessible to the public by the development of a system of good roads and traversible mountain trails.

The rain has not prevented their viewing and sensing the picturesque and aesthetic features of the mountain forests through which the members of the party have passed. And the need for highway improvements as a means of adding to the accessibility of the region, and of aiding in the protection and conservation of its forest and other natural resources, must have been made much more apparent by reason of the excessive rainfall than would have been possible had the weather been fine and travel more pleasurable.

It must be remembered, too, that this was not intended as a pleasure junket—not as a mere holiday outing.

It was planned for serious business, to promote a definite purpose that is of vital importance to the public; and the individual members of the party undertook this trip under no misrepresentations as to the possibilities of strenuous experiences and hardships it entailed.

They went prepared to "rough it" if necessary, so the fact that the meteorological conditions have been other than what might have been desired need occasion no disappointment.

And as for that, the unpleasant influence of the bad weather has been more than compensated by the wonderful demonstrations of warm-hearted hospitality with which the party has been literally deluged all along the route of travel.

Everywhere the tourists have gone the residents of the mountains and the various communities where stops have been made have vied with each other in their extensions of welcome and expressions of cordiality.

For all of this The Constitution—while in no measure surprised by it, knowing the temperament and sentiment of the people of north Georgia as we do—is duly appreciative, gratified and grateful.

And we are confident—more confident by reason of the adversities that have attended the party than we would have been otherwise—that the tour will prove to have been an unimpaired success from the standpoint of results.

THE DAVIS ANNIVERSARY.

In keeping with a patriotic and beautiful annual custom of years' standing, Atlanta will today pay formal tribute to the memory of the immortal Jefferson Davis.

The ceremonial exercises, beginning at 3 o'clock this afternoon, are to be held in the state capitol, under the auspices of the United Confederate Veterans and the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

They will consist of the customary music, oratory and other appropriate features, and they will, of course, be highly edifying and enjoyable.

But the occasion is significant and noteworthy, not so much because of the particular features of the program of exercises, as of the fact that the celebration takes place.

It is in the eternal fitness of things, and a tribute merited, that southerners, and Americans as a whole, should annually pause in recognition of the patriotism and statesmanship of Jefferson Davis.

He believed in an ideal, in a principle; and he sacrificed all for that ideal, and in support of that principle.

His earnestness, his sincerity, his genuineness of purpose were never questioned, either north or south.

He believed, and was willing to exert himself to the full extent of his powers in behalf of his belief.

Jefferson Davis typified the noblest and best in traditional American citizenship. He was born in Kentucky—then in the "far west," and at that time on the outskirts of American national development.

He was endowed with a spirit of independence of thought and action, inherited from generations of men who believed government should be organized to protect, not to exploit, the individual.

When war came with Mexico, he served. When he was called by his fellow citizens to represent them in congress, he served with the same valor and distinction, and with the same industrious and constant attention to the ideals and the aspirations of his constituency.

When his beloved south withdrew from the union, because it did not concur in the political opinions of the north, he accepted the helm of the Confederacy and directed its course as a patriot and a statesman; and, for four long, soul-trying years, displayed a steadfastness to the cause and to his fellow southerners that, while less spectacular, was no less determined and purposeful than was the heroic conduct of Lee or Jackson or Johnston.

Posterity will forever acclaim Jefferson Davis; and as time passes, and the proper estimate is placed upon the fundamentals for which the south fought and bled, his fame will become greater and more brightly illumine the pages of American history.

He will become a national, instead of a sectional, hero. For, regardless of whether one sympathizes with the thought of the south of 60 years ago, or with the north, none can question the sincerity of Jefferson Davis. His integrity, his honesty, his patriotism are beyond attack.

He was of the stuff of which real American statesmen are made.

We need more of his kind.

A PENALTY OF RICHES.

Whether Mathilde McCormick, grand-daughter of John D. Rockefeller, will be permitted to marry one Max Oser, a Swiss riding master, is further disturbing an already badly disturbed family—the parents of the young lady.

It is truly a pitiable situation.

The riding master is objected to by the mother of the bride-elect because of his age, reported variously from 40 to 50.

The father, Harold F. McCormick, head of the Harvester trust, apparently sees nothing amiss in a man of 50 wanting to marry a girl of 17, nor in a girl of 17 wanting to wed her quasi-aged riding instructor.

Therefore, there is an issue between the estranged parents of the girl; and the battle goes merrily on, with one day's reports indicating that the mother intends to win against any opposition; those of the next day, that the wedding is an eventual certainty.

But the most pitiable feature of it all is the fact that these people must unload their troubles, marital and pre-marital, upon the world for the entertainment and delectation of the public.

Such, however, is the penalty of wealth and prominence.

If one must be rich, it seems, one must pay the cost by having one's private affairs dissected, analyzed and ridiculed by the millions—the millions who do not enjoy the luxuries of money, but who may at least indulge in the luxury of observing and keeping tabs upon the misery and, sometimes, cussedness, of those who are so unfortunate as to be richer in worldly goods than in happiness.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution)

THE PROTOCOL OF MIDDLE AGE BREAKDOWN.

It is not so much from a horror of suggesting symptoms to the reader as it is from lack of dependable data that I hestiate to recite the history of protocol of cardiovascular degeneration. The breakdown of middle age is spectacular enough, to be sure, but that is not what I would picture for the reader. It is the slow, insidious, too often unrecognized or recklessly ignored undermining of health, the seemingly trifling impairment, the gradually diminishing physical efficiency, extending through months and years before the actual breakdown, that spells what I am trying to point out. From the very fact that this is a long drawn out process, a very insidious change from a former state of excellent health to the present state of indifferent health which it is the popular custom to ascribe to everything but CVD, the signs or symptoms are difficult to define. The patient himself can scarcely describe them intelligently, because they undergo gradual change as the heart artery system becomes little by little more impaired, and since the degenerative process is usually a matter of several years it is not surprising that a satisfactory running record is seldom obtained. Last year it was perhaps "a little stomach trouble," this year "nervous exhaustion;" next year it may be "overwork;" and as these fancied causes succeed one another their history fades from the mind. So I warn the reader that the picture I shall present of the incipient stage of heart artery wearing out is merely a general conception derived from a composite review of a number of cases in which fairly good records were kept for a period of years. You should not miss this. I'm gonna tell you the symptoms!

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Superfluous Hair.

Kindly tell me through your column, or by mail if you prefer, for which I will send necessary postage on notification, what to do for a case of superfluous hair on the face.—(E. W.)

Answer—Shave. In any case where there is some insuperable objection to the razor for removing superfluous hair, electrolysis in the hands of an expert operator is the only alternative I can recommend. A safety razor is in every way preferable to any chemical substance which is powerful enough to dissolve off hair.

A Poultice.

Your advice about the use of wheat bran prompts me to ask whether you favor the use of linseed meal mixed with bran or with breakfast cereal. Also whether you regard the use of glycerin taken internally as a good lubricant for the intestinal canal?—(J. L. S.)

Answer—The one before last, I think it was, I suggested here the use of about a tablespoon of whole flaxseeds daily, straight or with any cereal, as a natural lubricant laxative. If you do not mind the taste of linseed meal it would be all right that way. Glycerin has the same objection as salts, that is, it physics by extracting water from the delicate lining of the alimentary canal and is therefore not advisable.

The Old Osler Canard.

Do you agree with the celebrated Dr. Osler that when one reaches the age of 60 he should be chloroformed? To what extent will the taking of two miles of oxygen on the hoof each day prolong one's usefulness beyond the age of 60?—(C.)

Answer—Had Dr. Osler ever advocated such a thing I think I should agree with him, at least in many cases. But as he never did advocate it, I can't very well agree. 2 M O tres in diem will increase one's fitness about 200 per centum after 60, but two miles only once a day will just keep one so-so.

Clinical Tuberculosis.

Do you candidly believe there is any cure for tuberculosis? Please give me a good diet for a tubercular person. My husband has clinical tuberculosis and is at present in El Paso.—(Mrs. F. R. J.)

Answer—Clinical means sick-a-bed or sick-bed, or in conjunction with tuberculosis it means the disease is active, presenting signs which may be elicited in the examination of the patient or symptoms which the patient himself feels. That is a serious condition, and no one except the patient's own physician is competent to lay down a suitable diet. Active or clinical tuberculosis is probably the most frequently cured of all serious diseases. I have no specific remedy or cure in mind. The important essentials in the cure, named in order, are: (1) Constant supervision and direction of a good physician; (2) rest in bed; (3) open air; (4) sunlight; (5) suitable food; 6) freedom from emotional drains such as fears implanted by unkind or inconsiderate friends, homesickness among unsympathetic strangers, domestic or financial anxieties. I do not mention climate as a factor in recovery, because statistics prove that it is of no importance where the patient corrals the cure. I do not mention drugs or medicines, because that is an individual problem in each case, to be left entirely in the hands of the attending physician.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS
(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution)

There it lay, silent, lifeless. Two hundred feet or so. Big in bulk, solid, heavy—monarch in days gone by, this fallen tree.

I stood before it and wondered, thought and wondered. Why had it fallen? What numberless birds had nested near its heart and sung out their throats from its leaved and spreading branches? Perhaps many a human had stood beneath its extended arms and cooled in its shade.

I walked to where the roots of this great king of the woods once held their life in the ground. They were bent and broken.

Why did this beautiful specimen fall, when so many other trees less in grandeur still stood?

I wondered if the mystery of life did not also apply to trees—the stronger often falling in advance of the weak.

And why not—with the same God watching over trees and human bodies alike?

Perhaps a blight had come to the tree and, after standing for a long time against the wind and storm, its roots had given away before the strain of the years—and the towering dead finally fell.

I can almost hear that fall—full of tragedy and sadness.

How friendly the trees are! What a dreary world it would be without them. How they bring beauty and health and happiness into the world.

I have passed through practically treeless towns and have felt sorry for those who were compelled, perhaps, to live there. And I have suddenly come into towns where the trees fairly welcomed you and made you want to stay forever. How I love the great trees of California and the northwest!

Saratoga Springs in New York state stands happily in my memory for its wonderful trees. I believe its trees contribute quite as much to bringing back the health of those who go there as does the water from its famous springs.

I can understand the secret of Thoreau's wonderful sweetness of soul—he lived among and loved the trees.

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. M'INTYRE

New York, Maay 2.—The first showing of a "fillum" for Broadway consumption takes place in a small projection room in an office building on West Forty-second street. Upon this occasion only members of the cast, the directors, scenario writers and others intimately connected with the making are present.

It is the players' hour for "back-scratching." Even the director steps out of his haughty role and spreads pretty compliments. It catches the celluloid heroes and heroines with the make-up off. They speak in the argot of the lots about "cut-backs," "chalky streaks" and "double exposures."

The star and directar pull their comfortable chairs together and whisper confidences. The old character woman—blind on the screen—"mothers" the younger girls and sees in each one a potential Mary Pickford. She appears to feel that she can hold her job only by flattering the others.

In the background—true to his role—hovers the villain. He is selected for his hawk nose, beady eyes and cruel mouth. Yet in real life he seems to drip obeisance. When the star greets him afterward with "you did splendidly," the villain abases himself in service-like mutterings of gratitude.

Even the man who owns the trained dogs in there to share in the glory. The chief fear expressed is that the film, while of course an obvious masterpiece, will not be a box office favorite. Art is art, but when a star shares in the receipts—well, it makes him commercially thoughtful.

The temptress who lures the hero to the very brink of ruin is very demure "off location" in gingham dress and youthful poke-bonnet. She doesn't smoke and even blushes when the star pinches her cheek and tells her that for looks she "grosses a million."

All like to admit that there is much "hokum" but even so, they plead, that is what the public wants and it will take years to educate people to a higher standard. Fear after all, you know, the moving picture industry is only in its infancy. Oh, dear, yes!

Gerald Breitigan was, until a few weeks ago, city editor of the New York Globe and a capable executive. All his life, however, he has been a reporter and the urge to write, to go out into new adventures and to meet new faces was strong. The other week he resigned and became a reporter again. "Now I am supremely happy," he declares.

In no other sphere do people look so lightly upon losing jobs as theatrical folk. The final week of any production on Broadway is not a week of mourning by its members. Instead there is much jollification and the final night it is the custom for the star to entertain the entire company. This party generally lasts until Sunday morning and on Monday the players go out to hunt new jobs. Twelve productions closed on Broadway last week. As a result the cafes and supper clubs were crowded with those celebrating. Of course, it is all make-believe, for to many of them the loss of jobs means actual want.

In a haberdashery shop on Fifth avenue there is a display of handkerchiefs for men. In a corner of the window is a small card reading: "No handkerchiefs for less than $28 a dozen. Monograms extra." I remember when one couldn't have enough colds to use $28 worth of handkerchiefs.

Also—O tempora, O mores—the suspender is coming back—the same haberdashery proclaims by a gaudy window display. "English gentlemen have gone back to suspenders," another card announces. That is all it takes to start New Yorkers wearing 'em.

MORE TIME TO SIGN FOR MILITARY CAMPS

Because Georgia has secured little more than half of her quota for the four weeks citizen's military training camps, which will be held for the young men of the eight southern states in the Fourth Corps area this summer, the time limit for applications has been extended to June 15.

Ther are about 200 Georgia vacancies yet to be filled in spite of the fact that all applications were supposed to be in by June 1, consequently B. C. Riley, vice president of the military training camps association, in charge of the civlian agencies assisting the government in recruiting, urges the Georgia men to take advantage of the opportunity to equip themselves at Government expense for greater service in case of emergency and send for application blanks immediately.

Emphasis is being placed on the fact that young men who attend these camps will have a fine opportunity to engage in all kinds of athletics and have a good time under proper guidance, in addition to receiving army instruction with all expenses paid, and that they will benefit greatly mentally and physically. Any young man over 17 years of age is eligible for the red or elementary course, while the more advanced courses are designed for men with some experience or boys who attended camp last summer.

These camps will be held at Camp McClellan, Ala., July 27 to August 26. Instruction in infantry, cavalry, field artillery, engineers will be given, also at Fort Barrancas, Fla., July 27 to August 26, where instruction in coast artillery work will be given.

For further information and application blanks, address Major R. S. Lytle, recruiting adjutant, headquarters, Fourth Corps area, Fort McPherson, Ga.

ATLANTA RED MEN PLANNING UNIQUE EVENT IN WIGWAM

Atlanta will be invaded Saturday night by tribes of Indians and their squaws, with papoose and little Indian babies and all the other trappings and gala dress when several hundred parade through the streets at 8 p. m., winding up with a "snake dance" around the Five Points traffic tower amid the glare of red signal lights and the blare of tom-toms and the pow-wows of two hundred warriors.

Mayor Key has granted permission for the parade, which is to start from the wigwam promptly at 8 o'clock, moving up Mitchell street to Whitehall, out Whitehall to Peachtree, and, pausing long enough at Five Points to do the snake dance and give the real war whoop. Then the parade will continue out Peachtree, returning to the wigwam.

The Indian parade is being staged as a preliminary to the opening Monday night at the wigwam, 86 Central avenue, of the Indian Trading Post carnival, which, it is said, will be the most unique carnival staged by any secret order in Georgia. Every Red Man and Pocahontas in the hunting ground of Atlanta will participate in the festivities which continue for five nights at the wigwam, and to which the general public has been invited, free of charge.

EAST POINT WOODMEN MEMORIAL SERVICES

Annual memorial services of the Woodfmen of the World of the East Point camp will be held Sunday morning at 11 o'clock at the First Baptist church, all of the graves of the dead are urged to be present, and assemble at the Woodmen hall and then march to the church.

Just prior to the service at the church, allw of the graves of the deceased sovereigns will be decorated. This is one of the strongest camps in the state for its age. The degree team is being handled by Captain James T. Miller. Visiting sovereigns will be welcome to join in the service.

The program committee, consisting of J. T. Miller, G. C. Miller and H. B. Suttles, has arranged the program for the service Sunday. Rev. J. A. Crumley, the pastor of the church, will deliver the address.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH TO BEGIN SERVICES

At the Sunday morning and evening services of the East Atlanta Christian church Rev. W. E. Moore, pastor of the First Christian church of Marion, Ind., will fill the pulpit.

On Monday evening, June 5, at 7:45, R. L. Porter, of Athens, will begin a series of protracted services at this church. Mr. Porter comes highly recommended and his splendid preaching and evangelical support is expected to insipre this church to do greater work.

FREIGHT RATES ON MILEAGE BASIS WILL BE HIGHER

Freight rates under the new mileage basis schedule proposed by southeastern carriers would be higher between Virginia cities and southeastern points and between Atlantic ports and southeastern points, according to E. T. Wilcox, assistant freight traffic manager for the Atlantic Coast Line railway, who testified Friday at the interstate commerce commission hearing.

According to Mr. Wilcox, class rates between the points discussed have been unduly low for a long period, and he contended that the proposed increase is not unjust.

Mr. Wilcox took the stand after J. W. Perrin had completed testimony with reference to rates between eastern cities and interior points in Virginia and Carolina territory.

POLICE BARBECUE POSTPONED UNTIL SATURDAY, JUNE 17

The annual police barbecue, which was to have been held at Lakewood park Saturday, June 10, has been postponed until June 17, due to a change in the program of the Progress and Prosperity week arrangements.

Bad weather in Atlanta knocked a crimp into the Progress and Prosperity week arrangements, and those in charge of the celebration postponed the program, which necessitated a change in the barbecue plans of the police.

J. M. Tuggle, chairman of the barbecue committee said Friday night that all tickets that had been sold would be good June 17. Those who have not yet bought tickets, may get them from any policeman for $1 each.

The governor was not in the city but Christie declared he would remain over until Saturday to confer with the governor about the charges he made in the Duncan case.

Sleuths Staging Shadow Comedy In U. S. Capital

Constitution Bureau,
Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, June 2.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Official Washington is completely covered with an intricately woven web of secret investigators, representing both private individuals and the department of justice.

The exploits of these numberless sleuths are sufficient in character to appease the wildest ambition of a Sherlock Holmes or a baron whose experiences occupy a conspicuous place in fiction.

But fiction is superseded by the cold facts found in daily encounters between these cross currents of investigators whose paths cross each other often in the efforts to produce charge and counter-charge against public and private individuals. The first group includes Attorney-General Daugherty, senators and members of the house of representatives; the second pertains to private individuals involved directly and indirectly in the war frauds investigation.

Go to Arkansas.

Senator Caraway, out-spoken in his attacks on the attorney-general, recently asserted on the floor of the senate that department of justice agents had invaded his home state, Arkansas, for the purpose of uncovering information concerning his past life. Representative Johnson, of South Dakota, and Representative Woodruff, of Michican, who, jointly, were the first instigators of a congressional investigation into the affairs of the department of justice for failing to prosecute pending cases, have declared that they were being hounded by sleuths.

On the other hand, the attorney-general and his former legal associate in the Morse case, T. B. Felder, former Atlanta attorney, now residing in New York, have both been unable to account for the publication of letters, which it is thought were taken from their personal files. In seeking to uncover the source of this leak and others connected with the official affairs of the department, Mr. Daugherty has been charged with devoting the entire force of the bureau of investigation to this end. It is also claimed by officials of the department that political enemies are checking his movements in order to provide further material for the onslaughts which are being directed against him.

Follow Reporter.

Then comes the exploits of private agencies directed against political enemies and persons included in the war frauds investigation. So great are the number of all combined until personal clashes between opposing forces and between the pursued and the pursuer have occurred several times.

This representative of The Constitution, after lunching with one of the political characters under observation in Washington, was gum-shoed from the Raleigh hotel to the senate press gallery by two private sleuths, who evidently thought he had some mission at the capital other than a newspaper correspondent; they were confronted there by a cross-investigator, following, who set them right.

Now in Jail.

The person from New York who related to Senator Watson, of Georgia, and other members of the senate, the story of alleged violations of the prohibition laws, involving alleged conspiracy between Attorney-General Daugherty and T. B. Felder, was taken in by gum-shoe artists immediately after leaving the Georgia senator's office, and now reposes in jail as a reminder of their whereabouts, and that they are on the ground.

Cases of secrt servic agents being thrown off and delayed by opposing forces are common rumors and facts at the capital. No one knows where it will end; nor what the results will be. Washington is acquiring the habit of looking backward in an atmosphere rent with intrigue and expectancy.

OFFICER IS ARRESTED UNDER 'DRY' CHARGE

H. C. Walden, 29 years old, a supernumerary policeman, who lives at 828 Highland avenue, was arrested Friday night by City Detectives Swinney, Acree, Bell and Allen under charges of violating the prohibtion laws, and required to furish a $500 bond.

Following the officer's arrest a special order was issued by Police James L. Beavers suspending him from the force until the charge could be investigated by the board of police commissioners.

F. E. Bryant, 31 years old, who gave his occupation as a clerk and his home as Miami, Fla., was taken into custody Friday charged with violating the prohibition law, and was also placed uunder a $500 bond.

The Commercial High school class consisted of 29 members. The exercises were held at the school auditorium. W. W. Gaines, president of the board of education, made the annual address and delivered the diplomas. There was a program of essays and music. The following composed the class: Helen Allen, Elizabeth Askew, L. S. Bauknight, Mary Brown, Christine Brown, Annie Burnett, Sara Cohen, Bertha Jandrew, Paul Kars, Hazel Lord, Macie Little, Clestelle McNeal, Eunice Palmer, Sidney Price, Florence Radcliffe, Thelma Corvell, Ruth Feldman, Ike Florence, Hallie Griffin, Minnie Hale, Annie Laurie Hicks, Laura Jones, Dorothy Ray, Sara Smolensky, Irene Summer, Hazel Taylor, Ruby Warren, Ruth Kill, Alberta Willis and Myrtle Lebby.

LEGION CONTINUES MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Members of Atlanta Post No. 1 of the American Legion, at their regular luncheon Friday at the Ansley hotel decided to extend their campaign for membership, which was to have closed Saturday over through the first three days of next week. The tremendous rains of the past week have kept the committee workers largely indoors and this necessitated the extension.

However, the results of the campaign so far have been notable. More than 150 new members had been added to the post at noon Friday and there were several teams to be heard from.

The campaign will be resumed with new intensity Monday and looking toward this end teams have been organized nad replacements made. All members of the teams are urged to meet with the general membership committee Saturday at 12:30 o'clock at the chamber of commerce, when final plans will be worked out.

Noose Too Good For Drug Peddler Declares Warden

For the person who dispenses drugs to a narcotic fiend the noose is too good, in the opinion of J. E. Dycre, warden of the federal penitentiary, who declared Friday in an address before the Civitan club that the drug habit is the greatest menace to civilization at the present.

"Civilization is on a brink, and whether or not it goes over into the chasm is a question that should concern every patriotic citizen," the speaker said. "If there is any law that should be enforced more strongly than any other federal statute, it is the Harrison anti-narcotic act."

Warden Dyche said that for the fiend he has sympathy, but that the hangman's noose is too good for the peddler.

"Dope injures the brain, ruins the body and steals the soul," he said. "When a man craves and hasn't the means or the opportunity to buy it, he will lie to you, he will steal from you, and he will kill you for drugs."

Warden Dyche made the revelation that every fourth man at the federal penitentiary is an addict or drug distributor. During the month of May every third man admitted to the institution was an addict, he said.

He did not touch on the alleged smuggling conspiracy at the prison recently brought to the attention of narcotic inspectors.

HARDWICK REDUCES SEDUCTION SENTENCE

Jack Swords, convicted in DeKalb county several months ago upon a charge of seduction and given a sentence ranging from six to ten years by the jury, had his sentence commuted to a $300 fine by Governor Hardwick Thursday. The pardon board had declined to interfere in the verdict, and an appeal was made to the governor.

Swords was represented before Governor Hardwick by the law firm of Hutcheson, Wood, Morris & Joyner, of Atlanta, and L. J. Steele, of Decatur. The prosecution was represented by William Schley Howard.

SALVATION ARMY ASKS ATLANTANS FOR OLD CLOTHES

The social service center of the Salvation Army has issued an appeal asking that Atlantans donate old clothing, including shoes and hats, for the benefit of the poor. The appeal also asks for old newspapers, magazines, books and other articles which have been cast aside in the more fortunate homes of the city.

The appeal states that these articles are collected by the social service center, rejuvenated as far as possible and sold to those in need at a trifling sum—just enough to remove the element of charity. Any article is acceptable—underwear, socks, shoes, trousers, coats, shirts, hats. Also they will be called for promptly and just as quickly repaired and placed within the reach of those unable to afford to purchase better. Those desiring to donate are asked to call at 271 Luckie street or phone 2224.

NEW DOG MUZZLING LAW ENFORCEMENT TO BEGIN MONDAY

Enforcement of Atlanta's new dog muzzling law is to start in earnest next week.

City Clerk Walter Taylor said Friday that the city pound is being repaired and put in shape to accommodate the luckless canines that fall into the net of the dog catcher, and the catcher will be on the job ready to snare any dog wandering at large unmuzzled.

When one of the offending animals is caught it will be taken and turned loose in the pound. The city will keep it and feed it for five days. Then if a claimant hasn't turned up the dog will be put to death.

Bankers Imprisoned When Door to New Vault Closes on Them

Athens, Ga., June 2.—(Special.) Hugh H. Gordon, Jr., president of the Commercial bank here, and Harry Hodgson, bank director and University of Georgia trustee, spent thirty minutes behind the "bars" this morning.

The two bankers were examining a new vault being built for the bank, and while they were on the inside, the big steel door swung to, and it was only after a safe expert was found who could open the door that the bankers were released.

They declare the vault to be "safe."

Cornerstone Laying Delayed

JEFFERSON DAVIS BIRTHDAY TODAY

Atlantans Will Meet at State Capitol to Pay Tribute to Chieftain of Confederacy.

Atlantans will assemble at the legislative hall in the state capitol at 3 o'clock this afternoon to pay annual tribute to the memory of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, on the 114th anniversary of his birth.

The program was arranged and the ceremonials will be held under the auspices of Camp 159, United Confederate veterans, and the Atlanta chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy. Confederate veterans, Spanish war veterans and world war veterans will participate. The principal address will be made by Captain Scott Candler, of Decatur, who served in the world war. Other features will include music and the unveiling of an oil painting of President Davis by Mrs. John A. Perude, of the Atlanta chapter.

Those who will meet this afternoon in memory of the Confederate chieftain will assemble at the Ben Hill statue in the capitol, at 2:30 o'clock, and march to the legislative hall in a body. Jefferson Davis attended the unveiling of the Ben Hill statue. A committee of Atlantans, headed by the late General Andrew J. West went by special train to Montgomery, Ala., to meet President Davis and escort him to this city to attend the exercises. The Ben Hill monument was first erected at the junction of Peachtree and West Peachtree streets and later removed to the capitol. It was ddicated in June, 1886, only a few years before President Davis' death.

Letter from Davis.

It is of historic interest that H. F. West, well-known Atlanta real estate man, has the letter written to his father, the late General West, by President Davis, thanking him for being directly responsible "a pleasant visit to Atlanta." This letter was dated June 23, 1886, at Beauvoir, Miss., and is as follows:

"My dear Sir: Please accept my thanks for your kind letter and the accompanying photographs, as pleasing memento of my journey under your escort. With best wishes for you and your attendant color bearers, I am faithfully."

The letter is written on ordinary unruled linen paper but is as clear and legible, virtually, as a typewriter. It is notable that the lines are straight and there is no indication of a quavering, quivering hand, which might have been expected in the writing of an old man for Jefferson Davis, at that time was nearly 80 years of age.

WORK COMPLETED ON MONEY SHEET

A threatened deficit in the municipal treasury approaching $200,000 was wiped out by the finance committee of council, which completed its work of making up the June finance sheet with the budget in balance Friday, by slashing previous appropriations and anticipating revenue from general tax income.

Most of the shortage was absorbed by the simple method of anticipating receipts.

Councilman Watkins and Alderman Chosewood did not sign the sheet, objecting to some items included.

The committee increased a number of salaries. The salary of City Purchasing Agent J. N. Landers was raised from $3,000 to $3,600 a year. The salary of J. A. G. Beach, city plumbing inspector, was increased from $2,100 to $2,250.

The budget will be submitted to council next Monday for adoption.

Constitution Tour Of Forest Region Praised by Lee

"The Constitution's special tour of northeast Georgia has developed into a great revelation—not only for the official visitors from Washingthon, who are members of the party, but also for Georgians, unacquainted with that section of the state. It can be made into a national playgrounds."

That was the statement of Congressman Gordon Lee, of the seventh district, who has been a member of The Constitution's forestry expedition into north Georgia and who was in Atlanta for a short time Friday. Mr. Lee left the party at Cornelia, in northeast Georgia, Thursday and returned to Atlanta. He was met here by Mrs. Lee, who has been visiting relatives at Newnan and they left shortly after noon Friday for their home in Chickamauga, Walker county. They will leave for Washington Saturday and arrive at the capital Monday morning.

"The trip was wonderful and will tend to enlighten thousands of Georgians upon further possibilities of this state," continued Mr. Lee at the Ansley yesterday. "I am convinced and the federal officials and others who were members of the party also are certain all north Georgia can be converted into a national playgrounds. It abounds in scenery and the accommodations are ample to handle any number of pleasure-seekers. I thought I knew Georgia, but I frankly admit that this trip has informed me upon many things I did not realize—the great old state grows greater with personal inspection."

Congressman Lee was not enthusiastic about the roads. He said that they needed improvement in virtually every section and in some sections it is almost a question of rebuilding. This, he stated, will be attended to in time, for better roads movement has come to stay until the system of highways are adequate for proper transportation.

Congressman Gordon Lee shortly before he quit the party at Cornelia to return to his home at Chickamauga. He was enthusiastic; he was almost schoolboyish in his surrender to thrills.

"Do you know, I thought I knew Georgia," he declared. "I see that I didn't. Did anybody ever see such majesty of scenery? They never did. Anyway, it's certain they never witnessed anything lovelier, more splendid, more magnificent."

Great Scenery.

And so says every member of the party. The wild, rugged beauty—the great mountain sides, the forest-burdened hills, the enticing valleys, dotted with streams, reaching almost the dignity of rivers—all combine to create one scene that enraptures; a scene that develops enthusiasm; a view that makes one prouder still of Georgia.

The party probably breaks up Saturday. That is, the trip will end then. The homeward jaunt will begin sometime Saturday. It has been a great experience; one that will live long in the memory of those making it; and that should be of benefit because officials, federal and state, were members, and they are in a position to help preserve this vast area for generations and generations to come.

The street car was in charge of attention at the Grady hospital.

Motorman J. T. Lee, who told the officers that the negro was unloading some meat and other things from the wagon, which had been stopped midway of the block, and that he walked into the side of the passing street car. This, Officers F. A. Newport and O. B. Andrews say, was borne out by others who claim to have witnessed the accident.

Following the large number of accidents within the past few days, Detective Chief A. Lamar Poole Friday issued instructions to the men of his department to exercise diligence in curbing speeding by automobilists, and in enforcing the traffic ordinances.

Police Chief James L. Beavers had already issued a special order Thursday, which was read at all the watches, urging them to do their utmost to apprehend all violators of the traffic and speed laws. This order of Chief Beavers followed closely the serious injury of Miss Katherine Gershon, of 181 Fulton street, and Julius E. Gerson, a tailor in the Peachtree Arcade building, Thursday.

Both Miss Gershon and Mr. Gerson were reported to be resting comfortably Friday by their respective family physicians.

Profound Revelation.

Aside from the social features of this trip, it has been a positive awakening to the Georgians in the party, and a profound revelation to the visitors from Washington—the federal officials. They have witnessed scenes, have viewed a panorama of beauty that is unexcelled anywhere. It is not so stupendous as the Rockies, perhaps nor as bewilderingly canonized as the Sierras. But it is more attractive because it seems possible and is possible and inviting and attractive.

"I know the Rockies—I am a native of Colorado," declared Mr. McDonald at one time during the trip, "but Colorado boasts nothing more delightfully beautiful than this. North Georgia can become the playground of the nation with proper exploitation. All that is needed is to have vacationists make one visit—they'll come again."

Children of the Atlanta public schools laid down their books Friday for three months of gladsome summer vacation. They trooped home, the most of them proud possessors of promotion cards, and they will take up their studies next September in a new grade.

The municipal playgrounds under the direction of Miss Ludie Holland, will open next Monday There are eleven playgrounds for whites and three for negroes.

While youthful Atlanta will be at play many of the teachers will go to college or university to study through a summer course, in order to better equip themselves in their profession.

A letter from Major Egerton to his friend Arthur Doncourt, Esq.:

My Dear Doncourt: You ask me to tell you some of the circumstances underlying the Imbrie murder case. The first Imbrie was the Rev. Ernest, who went as a missionary to Sikannis Indians away back in '97. The Sikannis live away up the corner of British Colombia, on the headwaters of the Stanley river, one of the main branches of the Spirit river. There is not a more remote spot this side of the Arctic circle, nor one more difficult of access. The missionary brought with him his son, John Imbrie, a boy just approaching manhood. The boy fell in love with a handsome half-breed girl, the daughter of a wandering prospector and a Sikanni squaw, and married her out of hand. The heartbroken father was himself compelled to perform the ceremony. This was in 1886.

John turned out to be a good farmer and they prospered. His farm was the last outpost of agriculture in that direction. From the time he went in with his father John did not see the outside world again until 1889, when he took his wife and babies out, with a vain hope, I think, of trying to educate the woman. During all the years in her husband's house this woman resisted every civilizing influence, except that she learned to deck herself out like a white woman. She bore her husband twin sons, who were christened Ernest and William, pronounced Hooliam by the Indians. As is so often the case in mixed families, Ernest had a white man's nature, and William a red man's. When the time came they were sent out to Winnipeg to school, but William, true to the savage nature, sickened in civilized surroundings, and had to be sent home. On the other hand, Ernest proved to be a sufficiently apt scholar, and went on through school and college. During the whole period between his 13th and 24th year he was only home two or three times. William remained at home and grew up in ignorance. Ernest went on to a medical college with the idea of practicing among the Sikannis, who had no doctor. During his second year his father died, long before he could reach him, of course. He remained outside until he got his diploma. Meanwhile his mother and brother quickly relapsed into a state of savagery. Ernest had a painful homecoming, I expect. However, he patiently set to work to restore his father's farm. He managed to persuade his mother and brother to return and live in white man's fashion, but they made his life a hell for him, according to all accounts. Neither did the Sikannis welcome Doctor Ernest's ministrations. Since the death of the missionary they had been gradually slipping back into their ignorant ways, and now they instinctively took the part of the mother against the educated son.

Meanwhile that remote country was being talked about outside on account of the gold deposits along the upper reaches of the Stanley, largely mythical, I believe. However that may be, prospectors began to straggle in, and in the summer of the year following Ernest's return from college, the government sent in a surveyor, one Frank Starling, to survey the claims, and adjust disputes. Starling brought with him his daughter, Clare. Both the Imbrie boys fell in love with her according to their natures, thus further complicating the situation. Hooliam, or William, the ignorant savage, could not aspire to her hand, of course, but the young doctor courted her, and she looked kindly on him. I do not consider that she was ever in love with him. Like many a good woman before her, she was carried away by compassion for the dogged youth struggling against such hopeless odds. Her father completed his work and took her out, and Ernest Imbrie followed them. They were married in the early spring at Fort Edward. Ernest carried his bride back by canoe, hundreds of miles through the wilderness.

Their happiness, if indeed they were ever happy, was of brief duration. Ernest's mother, the breed woman, acted like a fiend incarnate. Then there was the brother-in-law always hanging around the house, nursing his evil passion for his brother's wife. The catastrophe was precipitated by a gross insult offered to the girl by her husband's brother. He broke into her room one night impudently assuming to masquerade as her husband. Her husband saved her from him, but in the shock to her nerves she experienced a revulsion against the lot of them—and small wonder! Her husband of his own free will took her back to her father. That's one of the finest things in the story, for there's no question but that he loved her desperately. The loss of her broke his spirit, which had endured so much. He never went back home. He felt, poor fellow, as if he were cast out alike by reds and whites, and his instinct was to find a place where he could bury himself far from all humankind. He was next heard of as living in a lonely shack above the great falls on the Swan river.

Meanwhile, the wrong she had done him began to prey on his wife's mind. She could not rest under the thought that she had wrecked his usefulness. Ernest Imbrie had, with the idea of keeping his mind from rusting out in solitude, ordered certain papers and books sent him. His wife learned of this address through his medical college, and she set off in search of him without saying anything to anybody of her intention. She and her father were still at Fort Edward and Hooliam Imbrie had been there, too, during the winter, not daring to approach the girl precisely, but just hanging around the neighborhood. He bribed a native servant to show him the letter giving his brother's address, and when the girl set off, he instantly guessed her errand, and determined to prevent their meeting. His mother joined him in the adventure. As soon as Hooliam reached Swan lake he began to meet Indians who had seen his brother, and thereafter he was always hailed among them as the White Medicine Man. The Indians never troubled to explain to themselves how he had got to Swan lake, because they ascribed magical powers to him anyway.

What happened between the brothers when they met will never be known for certain. Hooliam swears that he did not intend to kill Ernest, but that the deed was done in self-defense during a quarrel. However that may be, Ernest was shot through the heart with a bullet from Hooliam's gun, and his body cast in the river. We established the fact that Hooliam did not tell his mother what had happened at the Great Falls. She had been left behind at Swan lake and thought that Hooliam had found Ernest gone still further north.

Well, that's about all. I consider that they got off easily; Hooliam with twenty years, and the woman with half that sentence; but in the man's case it was impossible to prove that the murder was a deliberate one, and though the woman certainly did her best to put Stonor out of the way, as it happened he escaped.

You ask about the Indian woman, Mary Moosa. We overlook her at Swan lake on the way out. So she did not starve to death on the river, but recovered from her wound. When we got out as far as Caribou lake we met Mrs. Imbrie's distracted father coming in search of her. The meeting between them was very affecting. I am happy to say that the young lady has since recovered her memory entirely, and at the last account was very well.

Stonor is now at the officers' school at general headquarters, and if he passes his examinations will be commissioned in the summer. As a commissioned officer, he will be permitted by the regulations of the service to marry—you can guess to whom.

Yours faithfully,
FRANK EGERTON.

Epilogue.

In a little house in Vancouver, a young woman sat in her drawing room regarding a letter she had just read with a highly dissatisfied aid. It was a pretty little room, not rich nor fussy, but expressing the charm of an individual woman no less than the clothes she wore. To the mistress entered the maid, to wit, a matronly Indian woman with an intelligent face. She looked from her mistress' face to the letter, and back to her mistress again. When the latter made no offer to speak she said, for she was a privileged person: "You hear from Stoner?"

Clare nodded.

"He not pass his 'xamnation, I guess?"

"Certainly he has passed!" said Clare sharply. "If anybody can pass their examinations he can."

"Why you look so sorry then?"

"Oh—nothing. I didn't expect him to write it. A five-word postscript at the end of a matter-of-fact letter."

"Maybe he couldn't get leave?"

"He said he'd get leave if he passed. "Mayle he comin' anyhow."

"Of course not!"

"Don't you want him come?"

"I don't know whether I do or not." Mary looked perplexed.

Clare burst out, "I can't ask him. He'd feel obliged to come. A man—man like that anyway, would feel after what we've been through together that I had a claim on him. Well, I don't want him to come out of a sense of duty. Don't you understand?"

Mary shook her head. "If I want something I ask for it."

"It's not so simple as all that?"

"Maybe he think he not wanted here?"

"A man's supposed to take that chance."

"Awful long way to come on a chance," said Mary. "Maybe I write to him."

Clare jumped up. "Don't you dare!" she cried. "If I thought for a moment—if I thought he had been brought, I should be perfectly hateful to him. I couldn't help myself—is that a motor at the gate?"

"Yes, Miss, a taxicab."

"Stopping here?"

"Yes, Miss"—with absolute calm: "Stoner is gettin' out."

"What!—Oh, Mary—It can't be! It is!"

A bell rang.

"Oh, Mary, What shall I do? Don't go to the door! Let him wait a minute. Let me think what I must do. Let me get upstairs!"

Stoner got up and sat down, and got up again. He walked to the window and back to the door. He listened for sounds in the house, and then went back to his chair again. He heard a sound overhead and sprang to the door once more. He saw her on the stairs, and retreated back into the room. She came down with maddening deliberation, step by step. She did not look through the door, but paused a second to straighten a picture that hung askew on the wall. Stoner's heart was beating like a triphammer.

She came into the room smiling in friendly fashion with a little gush of speech—but her eyes did not quite meet his. "Well, Martin! Congratulations! I didn't expect you to follow so soon. So it's Inspector Stoner now, eh? Very becoming uniform, sir! Was the examination difficult? You must tell me all about it. I suppose you are just off the train. What kind of a trip did you have? Sit down."

He was a little flabbergasted by her easy flow of speech. "I don't want to sit down," he muttered huskily. He was staring at her from a white face.

She sat; glanced out of the window, glanced here and there about the room, and rattled on: "Haven't we got a jolly little place here? But I expect we'll be ordered on directly. Mary and I were talking about you the moment you rang the bell. Mary is so good to me, but her heart is already turning to Fort Enterprise and her children, I'm afraid."

He found his tongue at last. "Clare, don't!" he cried brokenly. "I didn't come eight hundred miles to hear you make parlor conversation. What's the matter? What have I done? If you've changed towards me tell me so plainly, and let me get out. I can't stand this!"

Panic seized her. "I must see about lunch. Excuse me just a moment," she said, making for the door.

He caught her as she tried to pass. "Damn lunch! Look me in the eye, woman!"

She relaxed. Her eyes crept imploringly up to his. "Bear!" she whispered. "You might at least have given me a moment's respite!—Oh, I love you! I love you! I love you!"

Closing Exercises At Peeples Street.

The widespread and growing interest in the public schools of Atlanta has been greatly increased by the inauguration of commencement exercises in the grammar schools, and the issuing of certificates by the board of education, to the pupils completing the seventh grade work. On Thursday evening the seventh grade of Peeples Street school held their exercises at the school, in the presence of a large number of the patrons and friends of the school. The literary and musical program rendered would have reflected credit on much older children, and it was a tribute to the excellent work of the teachers in charge of school activities. The program was as follows: Invocation, Rev. W. M. Seay; song, "America, the Beautiful," class; salutatory, Lanier Upshaw; piano, Frances Dudley; class historian, Helen Witherspoon; declamation, Evans Hall; song, "Music of the South," class; class will, Susie Sudderth; class poet, Allen Connally; piano, Virginia Cunningham; class prophet, Hilda Gumm; valedictory, Ruth Boardman.

At the close of the program, Rev. W. M. Seay delivered an interesting address to the class in which he stressed the imperative need for higher education, and told the parents it was their duty to give their children all the advantages afforded by our splendid high schools.

The following children received certificates and have registered for entry into high school next term: Helen Witherspoon, Evelyn Bohler, Dorothy McLendon, Susie Sudderth, Maude Sharpeless, Edwin Waddell, Allen Connally, Heber Wilson, Eva Gatlin, Shirley Jamison, Frances Dudley, Oletha Kinslow, Lillian Greenwood, William Turner, Lanier Upshaw, George Greenoe, Catherine Klaitz, Evelyn Kitchin, Hilda Gumm, Virginia Cunningham, Nathanael Greene, William Tumlin, Lamar Cobb, Ruth Boardman, Idelle Rogers, Helen Beasley, Evans Hall, John Alcorn, William Wortham.

Atlanta Children In Movie Matinee.

In place of the dance revue as previously announced, school children from the Ivy Street school and the Spring Street kindergarten will take part in the prologue at the children's matinee Saturday morning at the Howard theater.

Mrs. Porter Langston, chairman of programs for the boys' and girls' matinee will carry out a new policy in presenting special attractions at these performances. Children in the public schools who have been trained in dancing, music or patomime work will be presented at each matinee. Mrs. Langston believes that in carrying out this plan the work accomplished along these lines in the public schools will be stimulated, and at the same time the boys and girls of Atlanta will be given first-class entertainment.

A Country Dance" by the children of the Ivy Street school will be staged Saturday morning. Also, the "band" from the Spring Street kindergarten will play several numbers. These two attractions alone are sufficient to draw a large crowd, but in addition the movie program is of unusual merit.

Doug Fairbanks, the hero of the movies, will be shown in one of the best pictures he has ever appeared in "A Modern Musketeer." This picture ranks with "The Three Musketeers" and is entertaining and full of action. As a modern D'Artagnan, Doug is an ideal type, dashing, athletic and fearless. One scene was made at the Grand Canyon of Arizona, where a tribe of the Navajo Indians are shown. Marjorie Daw, the lovely little actress, plays opposite Doug and Tully Marshall is another actor in the play who is always popular.

In addition there will be an interesting educational feature showing how salt is produced and refined. Also, the Burton Holmes travelogue. Mrs. W. P. Lemmon will have charge of a committee of chaperons.

The performance starts promptly at 10 o'clock. In the future the children's matinees will be held Friday mornings instead of Saturday.

Big Opening Dance At Warm Springs.

The big opening dance at Warm Springs, on Pine mountain, will be held tonight. The Springs are under the same efficient management as last year, with the exception that the services of J. Mote Watts, who for years has been in charge of the Wigwam, at Indian Springs, have been secured.

Reports from Warm Springs are to the effect that the roads are rapidly drying out. Those who do not desire to motor through can leave Atlanta on the Southern at 5 o'clock and arrive in time for the dance.

Cantrell's orchestra has been secured for the season and this alone assures a good time to the patrons of Warm Springs.

Mrs. Roberts Honors Mrs. Bemis at Tea.

One of the largest parties at the Friday afternoon tea given weekly at the Atlanta Woman's club, was that at which Mrs. McCord Roberts was hostess, in honor of Mrs. Clarence Bemis, retiring press chairman of the club.

Mrs. Roberts and Mrs. Bemis received the guests in the art room of the club. A feature of entertainment was the reading of toasts to the honor guest.

Mrs. Roberts was gowned in black canton crepe, trimmed in chiffon and jet beads. She wore a black picture hat with a paradise feather.

Mrs. Bemis wore a lovely afternoon frock of figured georgette and leghorn hat trimmed in flowers.

Invited to meet Mrs. Bemis were the society editors of the Atlanta papers, the officers of the Woman's club and chairmen of the various committees and departments.

Miss Nan du Bignon Writes Interestingly of Europe

Miss Nan du Bignon, of Atlanta, who has been traveling in Europe for the past four months, writes most interestingly of her travels, to her sister Mrs. Robert C. Alston.

Miss du Bignon is now in Dresden, where she will spend several weeks. She met Miss Fanneul Harrison, of Atlanta, while in Vienna, and also met Miss Henrietta Davis, another Atlanta girl, who is traveling on the continent.

Excerpts from her letters include:

Writes from Rome.

Rome, Italy—"Today, the streets have been very gay and lively. All cars, buildings and motors are decorated with flags and soldiers everywhere with numerous bands, all getting ready for the arrival of the king and queen of Belgium.

"At 3 o'clock they arrived, and the whole royal procession passed in front of our hotel. The king and queen of Italy, with, of course, his wonderful looking body guard, all over six feet, and wearing attractive uniforms. Then came the royal visitors, ambassadors, and lesser royalties. It was glorious sunshine when they passed and in ten minutes a big hailstorm scattered the crowd, and since then we have had two others, with sunshine between, and the weather is much colder.

"We spent this morning in driving around the Borghese gardens and going through the lovely gallery of sculpture and paintings. You remember, naturally, Titan's 'Sacred and Profane Love,' and Correppo's 'Beautiful Diana,' with the two adorable cupids? Also Bernini's several loveliest works? It was a most delightful morning, and 2 o'clock came before we realized it.

Audience With Pope.

"Through friends from California, I had an audience with the pope, at which seven were present.

Florence.—"We motored out on Monday with a friend to see some old villas, and as he was a friend of Lady Sybil Scott, the second cousin of Lord Lascelles, who owns Villa Medici, where Princess Mary spent her honeymoon, so the first one visited was that one, and lovely and charming it was, with its fascinating gardens, pergolas and walls aflame with wistaria, beds of forget-me-nots, and wonderful poppies and roses.

"It is built high on a hill and has an excellent view of Florence and Fiesole. The old wallpaper, hundreds of years old, was all hand-painted and splendidly preserved.

Villa Gamberaia.

"Lady Scott had gotten us permission also to see the Villa Gamberaia, noted for its formal gardens and magnificent views. In splendor and size this last quite outshone the former, and the Prince's child was too cunning, and so glad to see someone. She was five and spoke four languages. She made me go to see all the ponds where they had frogs and fish and into her 'dell,' where the fairies played. This last was a grove of ilex trees, so thick that the sun could never shine through and it was easy to conjure up gnomes, dwarfs or fairies. In the garden, she insisted upon picking us big bunches of flowers, and begged us not to leave.

"Tuesday, we spent in the Pitti gallery, and in the afternoon, at Santa Croce, the Westminster Abbey of Italy, where Dante, Michael Angelo, Machiavelli and other famous men are buried, and where there are some fine frescoes by Giotto. We motored to Sienna and all agreed it was the most perfect trip we had made. Every foot of the way is beautiful, and the road twisted and turned around hills, and along ravines, with superb views of distant hills, and below every inch of land cultivated and always in sight, were huge snow white, long-horned oxen, with long red tasseled fringe over their faces. The little towns with their towers nestling in the hills, and the deep blue sky beyond, made it all too lovely to be described by my pen.

"The Cathedral was beautiful inside and out. White, red and black marbles, and the pavement of marble, inlaid with brown and black, representing scenes from the Bible, by famous artists of the twelfth and fifteenth centuries. It is covered over with wood now and only opened in sections to be shown, except upon certain festivals of the church when all is uncovered for weeks.

"We returned via San Guivignana, an old town of the eleventh century, perched on the top of the highest hill and with its thirteen towers soaring in the air it looked exactly like a Maxfield Parrish picture. In the feudal days, all the family's strength was decided by the height of its towers, and in front of the Cathedral was the tower of the reigning house, and no one could build higher than this one. Some of the loveliest frescoes I have ever seen were in this funny old town, and there were two interesting churches. No house is allowed to be built until plans are approved by council, and in consequence, all are mediaeval in style, and makes you think you were back in the middle ages."

Miss Raine's Guests Given Bridge-Tea.

Complimenting Miss Katherine Raine's house party guests, Misses Elizabeth Cooper, Martha Everett, Katherine, Morris, and Helen Chamberlain, Miss Lillian Cain entertained at a bridge-tea Friday at her home in West Peachtree street.

The honor guests were presented with hand-embroidered handkerchiefs and the winner of top score with a hand-painted basket.

Miss Cain was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. A. P. Cain, and her sister, Mrs. Carlton Lee.

Miss Cain was gowned in a sport model of white.

Twenty-five guests were invited to meet the honor guests.

To Miss Koplin.

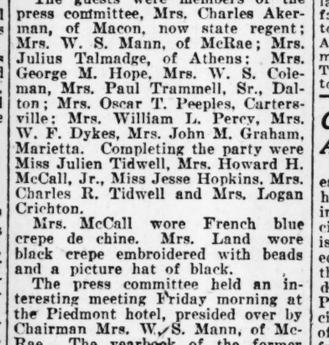

Mrs. Harold Way was hostess at a pretty luncheon Friday afternoon at her apartment in Piedmont avenue, given in honor of Miss Viola Koplin, who is moving to California. Mrs. Harold Way assisted in entertaining.

In addition to the honor guest, the guests included Miss Sarah Haney, Miss Lenora Anderson, Miss Kate Albright, Miss Florine Tillman, and Miss Frances Sefton.

Sunday Constitution

These 23 masterpieces of short-story writing will run for 23 consecutive weeks, each illustrating some phase of the most vital problem of present-day civilization—marriage.

Each of the authors is known to practically every reader of the Class A magazines of the United States, and most of them are internationally famous. They have delighted the fancies and enriched the intellects of millions of people who speak the English tongue.

They are leaders in their line; nationally recognized as leaders. The Constitution Magazine is a leader in its line, nationally recognized as a leader. It is natural, then, that The Constitution should be the only newspaper in the south Atlantic states to offer its readers this feast of high-class fiction.

What Do You Know of Marriage?

If you are unmarried these authors may be able to tell you things you ought to know.

If you are married they may be able to help you to avoid some of the shoals that lurk in the marital sea, or to steer your ship out of some of the deadly calms that sometimes come.

Married or single, engaged or foresworn to celibacy, these two score and three famous writers have something to tell you that will inform you, probably, and entertain you, surely.

The first story appears Sunday, June 11, and one will appear each consecutive Sunday until November 12.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

SITTING DOWN VERSUS FALLING DOWN

Did you ever learn to ski, Reader Friend?

It is a queer season to be asking that question, but something brought to my mind a lesson I learned at the same time I learned to ski and I wondered if others had had the same experience.

When I first tried to slide down a hill standing up on those exasperatingly self-willed strips of wood known as skis, I fell down almost before I had started. I practiced and practiced and still I fell, until I made a great discovery. Most of the time I wasn't really falling down at all. I was simply sitting down through fear that I was going to fall.

I suppose you could write the rest of what I am going to say for yourself, but that would deprive me of my feminine privilege of the last word.

Over and over again since I made that discovery in regard to skiing I have made it about other things.

Because I'm Afraid.

I don't fall down because I couldn't keep my balance if I tried hard enough. I just give up and sit down because I am afraid I am going to fall.

If I did not expect to fall, if I tried a little harder, I needn't fall.

If I had been full of the I-Can spirit instead of the spirit of fear, I should have slid that hill long before I did.

There is a technical term lately come into more common use to describe this same state of mind. "Inferiority complex." It means that you get it into your head that you are more stupid than other people and that you can't do things and you hypnotize yourself into stupidity.

I Hit the Ball.

I was playing a game of croquet the other day. My opponent was ahead. I had a hard shot to make. He was a better player than I. I started to hit the ball in a half-hearted way, thinking, "Oh well, he will beat me anyway. I never can make those long shots." I was only half aiming. Then I gave myself a mental shake and said, "Why can't you hit the ball, it is just a matter of mental concentration. What's the matter with your mind? If you miss that ball it won't be that you fell down on the job. It will be that you sat down." And I hit the ball.

Getting Ready to Sit Down.

I have a friend who has gotton it into her head that she is losing her looks and that her husband is going to fall in love with one of the pretty girls he meets in his particular line of business. She is so hipped with this idea that she has got an inferiority complex and has adopted an almost apologetic ingratiating manner towards him. Did you ever know the man who wouldn't think he deserved an apology if you offered it to him. I never did. Just what that woman fears will happen if she doesn't look out and it will be not because she fell down but because she sat down.

Here's the opposite state of mind, expressed in a letter written to the editor of a love problems page in a woman's magazine. "When my husband came to me with the announcement that he loved another I shrugged my shoulders and replied, 'Piffle, isn't it a little late to mention it? Here, hold the baby a while.'"

I'll bet that husband conceived a new respect for his wife on the spot.

There may be such bad bumps coming to her on her life journey that that woman will eventually fall down. But this is sure—she will never sit down.

Murrah Pleased Over Assignment To North Georgia

"Of course, I am pleased with my assignment to north Georgia and Alabama. It is one of the most delightful jurisdictions in Southern Methodism. Besides, there is a considerable element of sentiment entering—my father was a native Georgian and I am a native of Alabama."

That was the statement of Bishop M. B. Murrah, of Memphis, who was assigned to a portion of Bishop W. A. Candler's district by the general conference held last month at Hot Springs, Ark. Bishop Murrah arrived in Atlanta Thursday to attend the meeting of the board of trustees of Emory university. He left at night for Memphis, where he will spend a few hours at home and then leave for Jackson, Miss., to attend a trustees meeting of the Millsap college in that city on Monday.

Well Known in Atlanta.

Bishop Murrah is better known in Atlanta than in other sections of his new jurisdiction because of his frequent visits here to attend meetings of Emory university trustees. He knows virtually all the ministers, however, of this district, and is a personal friend of the great majority. His jurisdiction before being assigned here included three conferences in Missouri and the Denver conference in Colorado.

"I would like to remove to Atlanta," Bishop Murrah stated, "but I have my home in Memphis, have been living there for years and it is convenient to Alabama and Georgia. I know of nothing that would be more delightful than to live among Georgians, and particularly Atlantans, but it would entail much difficulty to make the change and I shall continue my residence in Memphis. I can be of just as much use, just as easy of access and accomplish identically the same results."

No Politics in Election.

Bishop Murrah disposed of the rumor that "politics" played a part in the Hot Springs general conference, with a push-away gesture and a short laugh. He insisted that the general conference was simply an active, earnest conference and men had favorites.

"But so far as there being 'politics' used in an improper sense," he declared, "it didn't exist. Conference questions undoubtedly were discussed in hotel lobbies and other places. Also, we must make allowances for newspaper enterprise. Newspaper people are very alert, occasionally, to look for the unusual. I think that the Hot Springs conference was one of the greatest in the annals of Southern Methodism."

Returning to his new charge, Bishop Murrah stated that he had no matters as to his program that would be of interest. He stated that he had nor had time to analyze the situation and that no program, prospective or otherwise, had been considered.

"All that I know," he concluded, "is that I am exceedingly glad to become a part of the North Georgia and Alabama conferences. We have a magnificent field here and hope to continue to accomplish much good."

Walls of Home Of Governors Begin to Fall

The walls of the old governor's mansion that have echoed so much of Georgia's political and social history began to fall to the ground Friday while workmen plied axes and crowbars to make way for the new Capitol City Market building that will be the last word in modern market engineering.

The old mansion was originally the home of John H. James, a banker of the earlier days, whose later home occupied the present site of the Capital City club. Since its purchase by the state, more than fifty years ago, more than a dozen governors have occupied the dwelling. The mansion was modeled after the old Virginia colonial homes and was built when Peachtree street was little more than an old Cherokee trail running through the country-side, and most of Atlanta was south of Five Points.

Governor Hardwick was the first governor in fifty years who has not occupied the mansion. When he took office it was deserted except for a caretaker.

The site was leased to the Massel Realty company, who in turn, has given an option with the lease incorporated to the Capitol City Building and Market company, of which Paul E. Vose is president, for a portion of the site fronting 350 feet on Cain street and beginning seventy-five feet back from Peachtree street.

As soon as the mansion is completely dismantled, officials of the company announce, construction of a new, three-story market, similar to successful markets in various parts of the country will begin. This building, they declare, will be the finest of its kind in the south.

Noted Playwright Object of Attack By San Franciscan

Baltimore, June 2.—When the steamship Columbia docked here this afternoon from San Francisco, United States officials placed George H. Broadhurst, noted playwright and producer of New York, and J. B. Symon, of San Francisco, under detention as the result of an alleged murderous assault committed by Symon upon Broadhurst, while the vessel was on the high seas.

It is not known what led up to the attack on Broadhurst. No statement from Symon was forthcoming and Captain Thompson, of the Columbia refused to make any statement concerning the affair.

Both men will be given a hearing in the United States district court.

AT WOMAN'S WINDOW
BY W. L. GEORGE

Have you ever been in a museum seen a small party, the father nodding his head, the mother vacant upon a seat, a small boy wriggling and a small girl preparing to cry? They are sight-seeing. They are enjoying themselves, but they are very, very tired. They would like to go home but they dare not say so. When they have finished with the museum they will go and see a church, and at last pretend that they "ought" to see the park, being very glad of the rest.

There is nothing essentially unhappy about sight-seeing, and we all agree that there are many places in our own country and abroad where we may be stimulated by beauty, where our knowledge may be increased. But it is very easy to turn pleasure into torture. One needs to know how to see sights as well as to know how to run an automobile. One should never visit a place of interest unless it really interests one. For instance, some of us enjoy churches while others prefer picture galleries. If that is the case let each one visit only what he or she fancies. This seems obvious, but in fact people do not follow that course. They do not realize that the only value of sight-seeing is pleasure. It may be a novel pleasure, leading to ripeness of emotion, but it is a pleasure. Let the sight-seer say to himself: "Do I want to see the National Memorial or do I think I ought to see it?" If the reply is ought, don't go. If you prefer to visit mainly the lounges of the big hotels, that is what you need to do. What you want is good for you, and nothing in the world will make you want anything else.

DRESS
BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

A type of street frock frequently worn these mild days carries several features that the dressmakers have been trying to establish. One is the wide skirt that hangs straight. The third is the addition of startling lingerie collar and cuffs. The sketch shows one of these.

It is of blue crepe de chine which has become as popular as black. Possibly it is the next best thing in the minds of those who do not wish to embark on gay colors. The skirt is pleated, but not drawn in at the hips, keeping the line straight from shoulder to hem, but presenting something newer than the chemise frock. The long-waisted blouse has sufficient fulness under the arms to keep it from the ugly, tightly drawn effect across bust and shoulder blades that far too many of the recent gowns gave to the holder. This is a signal improvement. The long sleeves are made ornate and more graceful by sling cuffs, wide and of double thickness of beige handkerchief linen to match the collar. Neither of these accessories hides their light under a bushel these days. They have sprung into brilliancy like robins on a lawn after a rain.

The blouse and skirt are joined at the hipline, where a belt is expected. The marking there is sufficiently firm to have a meaning, one that conveys to the public that the wearer knows quite well where belts are supposed to go. Yet, just for the fun of the thing they show another one, to prove that the normal waist is the place where belts will soon go.

Some of the smart women do not take the trouble to accentuate both tricks. They frankly wear their belts where their waist is marked. The hip line must go into the discard when these things are being done. And it will not be in fashion long. This is well for the average, or rather typical, American figure. For this purpose there are colored suede belts, others of shining leather, not with the several metallic ornaments, but merely a simple buckle, or a chain of metal links. The dog leash belt is well in the lead, so is the dog collar kind.

The house of Callot introduced these last August, so they are not new to a few exclusive dressmakers, but they are new to the mass of people.

GOOD THINGS WITH THE RHUBARB THAT IS LEFT.

There is still time to make use of the end of the rhubarb, for there will be some in the markets for days to come. That second cutting of rhubarb lengthens our season for this succulent vegetable, if that is what one calls it, or fruit, to a delightful degree.

Here is a good recipe, if you wish one:

Two and one-half cups flour, one-half cup butter, one-half cup lard, one-half cup water, one-fourth teaspoon baking powder. Sift flour with powder; rub in lard and butter cold; add the water; mix into a smooth dough. One and a half bunches of rhubarb, one and one-half cups sugar. Cut fruit in small pieces after stripping off skin, cook it very fast in shallow stewpan, with sugar. Line pie-plate with the paste; wet rim; add rhubarb, cold; lay three bars paste across, fastening ends; lay three more across, forming diamon-shaped spaces; lay around a rim, wash over with egg, and bake in a quick oven fifteen minutes.

Plain stewed rhubarb — rhubarb sauce—is another standby delicacy. There are several ways of preparing it. One is to stew the rhubarb fast so that the shape of the pieces is not kept. Another is to cook it in a double boiler so that each length is maintained unbroken. Plenty of sugar is required in either case.

Here is a good rhubarb conserve, made of raisins and rhubarb. The raisins give the sweetness which the rhubarb lacks:

Rhubarb and raisins—Soak some seeded raisins until they are soft and plump in a very little water, and then add them, water and all, to rhubarb, prepared for cooking. Sweeten to taste and serve cold.

WHAT'S WHAT
By Helen Decie

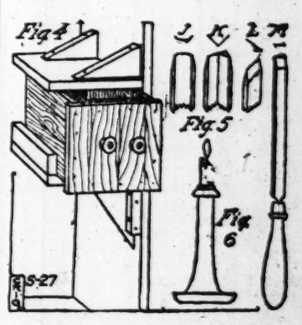

An Augusta (Ga.) correspondent asks: "When dessert is served, should the dinner plate be pushed aside to make room for the dessert plate? If so, at which side should the dinner plate be placed?

If there is adequate service, the dinner plate is removed to make room for the salad plate, and this plate, in turn, is taken away before dessert is served. When there is no maid, the hostess has the plates passed to her and places them on a tea wagon, from which she takes, in turn, the salad and the dessert. Our correspondent's query seems to eliminate both trained servant and trained hostess. If the dessert is passed to him without the customary change of plates, the only thing for him to do is to put the dessert dish on his dinner plate. To push the plate to either side would crowd the table awkwardly for adjoining diners.

TURNING LATHE, TOOL DRAWER, ETC.

Materials needed: Wood from boxes; spool for handle; almost any sort of a ready-made box will do for the drawer itself.

Figure 4 shows the drawer completely installed. Build a shelf on which the drawer is to slide and another shelf immediately above which covers the top and keeps out dust. Face the front end of the drawer with an end piece one inch larger all around than the drawer itself. Saw a spool into two pieces and screw into place for handles. The outer edge of the lower shelf should have a piece nailed full length to keep drawer in position.

Women Officials Ban Blue Laws While Governing Wyoming Village

Cokeville, Wyo., June 2.—The petticoat triumvirate. That's the name of the government of this town since the last election.

And the voters are pretty well satisfied with the job they did when they sent Mrs. Goldie Noblitt, Mrs. Ethel Stoner and Mrs. Retta Roberts into city hall here to scour out the place a bit.

Mrs. Noblitt is mayor and the other two are councilwomen.

They ran on the "petticoat" ticket, also dry, against two male tickets reputed to be wet.

Their platform, however, pledged them not to enact any "stringent measures" or "blue laws."

They are running the town on the "housewife's budget" system and every one seems satisfied—even their political enemies whose pre-election predictions saw dire days ahead with women occupying their places at the head of the municipal government.

Mrs. Stoner and Mrs. Noblitt are the wives of wealthy sheep-breeders and Mrs. Roberts is the wife of a hotel proprietor.

Agnes Scott Students Camp at Lake Bennett:

The following young ladies, students of Agnes Scott college, are camping at Lake Bennett: Misses Jean McAlister, Charlotte Keesler, Susan Malone, Mary Knight, Concord Leake, Marian McCamy, Essie Roberts, Elizabeth Ried, Katherine DuBose, Roxie Ried and Pete Hutchenson.

Mrs. Frank Beall is chaperon.

Mrs. Cramer Honored At Pretty Bridge-Tea.

Mrs. Ruth Cramer, of Carrollton, was honor guest at the bridge-tea at which Mrs. John T. Tucker was hostess at her home on Juniper street Friday afternoon.

Gladioli, sweet peas and snapdragons were used in profusion in the rooms where the guests were received.

Mrs. Cramer was presented with a hand-painted dorin.

The high and low score prizes were a set of card table numbers and a novelty fan.

Mrs. Robert Redding assisted her mother in entertaining.

Mrs. Tucker was gowned in navy blue georgette crepe, heavily embroidered in crystal.

Mrs. Cramer wore a lovely afternoon canton crepe with a picture hat of blue trimmed with lavender sweet peas.

Mrs. Redding was lovely in a buff-colored georgette crepe gown.

Lovely Breakfast In Compliment to Visitor.

A pretty compliment to Miss Elizabeth Cooper, of Henderson, N. C., the guest of Miss Catherine Raine, was the breakfast at which Mrs. Wilmer Moore was hostess Friday morning at her home on East Eleventh street.

Adorning the table was a large silver basket filled with a lovely combination of roses, sweet peas, snapdragons, and daisies.

The place cards were hand-painted in flowers.

Covers were placed for Miss Cooper, Miss Raine, Miss Martha Everett and Miss Katherin Morris, of Henderson, N. C.; Miss Helen Chamberlain, Miss Callie Orme, Miss Evelyn Jackson, Miss Bessie Mitchell, Miss Marion Hull and Mrs. Moore.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

When Mopping.

Do not let small puddles of water stand after mopping the kitchen floor. They will soften the wood, causing it to splinter readily.

To Clean Cards.

Playing cards can be cleaned by rubbing them with talc, or placing them in bran heated to the highest possible temperature. Stir them around in the bran to remove grease.

A Change in Salad Dressings.

To one cupful of boiled dressing add one tabelspoonful each of hard-boiled egg chopped fine, minced onion, green pepper, pimento, paprika and salt to taste. Mighty fine.

Ventilation.

A room canot be properly ventilated without a certain amount of draft. If you have sufficient clothing to keep you warm and comfortable, you can have opposite windows open without danger of catching cold.

The Involuntary Vamp

Who's Who in the Story

Diana Langley, who possesses to a superlative degree a quality of "lure" wished for her at birth by her youthful aunt,

Marjorie Langley, herself a notable beauty, to whom

Stephen Dale, a wealthy bachelor, had been devoted for years, impetuously declares her love for Dale, and is gently told by him that he can never marry because there is a trace of insanity in his family. To soothe her pride, she elopes with and marries

Alex Leigh, a young navy officer, whose uncle

Admiral Armstrong, is sentimentally interested in Marjorie Langley, at the same time that

Sylvia Saunders, a hopeless suitor for Diana's hand. Young Leigh is ordered to California and on the day Diana leaves she discovers that Dale thinks enough of her to curtail a yachting trip to see her off. She also discovers that Alex is jealous and dictatorial and meeting with complete disillusionment, begins a flirtation with

Lynn Johnston, an old acquaintance, whom she meets on the train. Getting off the train for a bit of exercise, Diana and Johnston are left behind at a small New Mexican town.

After discovering that there is no means of leaving the town that night, they are met by a strange horseman,

The rider, who turns out to be,

Pedro Dominguez, invites them to his ranch and against Johnston's wishes, Diana accepts.

After resting at the ranch, Diana received a note from Dominguez saying that Johnston would not be at dinner.

CHAPTER XXX.

Serious Complications.

It was the postscript to Pedro Dominguez's note gave food for thought.

"Your husband is indisposed and will not favor us with his presence,' Dominguez had written.

Diana had a pang of misgiving. Was it a subterfuge? Had she been wrong in accusing Lynn Johnston of oversuspicion? Was their host not the genial and courteous gentleman that he had given away every evidence of being?

Stories of abduction, ransom and worse flashed across her mind, but she dismissed them impatiently.

Lynn Johnston was a city product. It would not be strange if a long tramp in the hot sun and sand had done him up pretty thoroughly.

The idea of dining alone with the handsome Spaniard fired her romantic imagination and she spent a bit of time in freshening up her appearance.

When she stepped into the cool stone-arched balcony where a table was set for two, the light from two quaint carved candelabra that might have come from the altar of some old Spanish church turned her fluffy hair to pure copper and gave mysterious purple depths to her eyes. Over the shoulders of her pongee frock she had thrown a scarf of mellow old lace, which the Mexican girl had brought her, and had knotted it fichu-fashion across her breast.

The man who rose from the shadow beyond the candle light made no effort to conceal the admiration of his eyes.

"The Senora is as fresh as a rose. Could one believe that she had ridden far in the dust and sun this afternoon?"

Diana smiled.

"The candle light is kind, senor. And I have borrowed your scarf to make myself a fitting dinner companion."

He bowed low.

"No man could ask a lovelier guest than the Senora as she is in her traveling gown, but my scarf is honored. It shall be laid away hereafter that it may never be sullied by another wearer. Or better yet, will you not accept it as a poor memento of this occasion? It becomes you amazingly, Senora."

Diana shook her head as she seated herself in the chair he drew out for her.

"Tank you, but that is impossible. I have already trespassed too far on your generosity. Tell me, what has happened to my companion in distress, Mr. Johnston?"

"Your husband?"

Dominguez motioned a servant to fill Diana's glass with wine.

Diana hesitated a moment.

Should she stick to the story as Johnston had told?

But once already she had denied to Dominguez that Johnston was her husband.

She looked down, tracing a pattern on the tablecloth with her fork.

"Well, you see," she stammered, "he is not exactly my husband—that is—not yet—."

"Ah! He is then your affianced husband?"

The idea seemed an inspiration to Diana. It was far preferable to claiming Johnston as a husband and surely the role of affianced bride would be quite as effective in forestalling any flirtatious advances from her host, provided Johnston's apprehensions had any foundation whatsoever.

Vanishing Reality.

She nodded, lowering her eyes demurely.

"Ah," he said again, "I congratulate Senor Johnston with all my heart. He is a most fortunate young man. What a pity that he should be ill!"

Something in the suave tone, made Diana glance up sharply.

Dominguez had lighted a cigarette. He held it between shapely sun-tanned fingers. The olive tint of his face was a pleasing contrast against his immaculate white ducks. There was even a crimson sash showing where his coat was open over a silk shirt as perfect as any Fifth avenue maker could produce.

Diana felt like pinching herself to be sure that she was not playing the lead in a Broadway melodrama. She caught herself, expecting to hear the rattle of taxicabs in the street outside the theater and newsboys crying the morning papers, or perhaps a snatch of a song from the musical comedy playing in the theater next door.

Instead, she heard only the drone of curious night insects in the palms in the patio, and some distance away the thrum of a guitar.

And because she had a queer hollow feeling in the region of her heart when she realized that it wasn't just make-believe, she smiled entrancingly at her host across the flickering candles and enquired casually:

"Is Lynn really ill, or just a bit done up after the long hike?"

Dominguez shrugged.

"I fear it was the sun. Senor Johnston is not what you call athletic—is that not so? He is resting comfortably but I fear that it will be many days before he can be about again."

Diana uttered a little cry of dismay.

"But that is impossible. I mean—that is—he must get all right at once. We have to go on—we."

"It will make me most happy to have the Senorita remain here until Senor Johnston is able to travel. He shall have every attention, I promise you."

"But I can't—I—Oh, Senor, won't you send me to the station for the very earliest train," pleaded Diana in alarm.

Visions of Alex and the hue and cry that would go out for her lent poignancy to her appeal.

She was very lovely in the candle light with quivering lips and flushed cheeks and the man opposite her drew a long breath before he answered gently:

"Tomorrow, we shall see."

Pupils of Mrs. DeLamar Give Piano Recital.

A recital was given by the piano pupils of Mrs. W. A. DeLamar at her studio, 93 Loomis avenue, Friday evening.

The pupils showed careful and through training. The deuts and quartettes for two pianos were specially enjoyed.

Those taking part were: Mary Kirkland, Annie Robertson, Mildred Meadows, De Alva Cummings, Nelle Johnson, Mrs. Helen Vittur, Eleanor Spier, Clara Howard Meadows, Lois Cummings, Evelyn Satterwhite, Gussie May Thompson, Glenna May Satterwhite.

Secure Packing.

Straw or excelsior that has been slightly dampened is best for packing glass or china. The moisture causes both of these filling materials to swell, thus wedging the packing in between the breakable articles much tighter than it can be done by hand.

The Children's Hour

The dainty little cookies you make always please the children. Let Jack make the cutters for you. You will have a better variety of shapes.

Cut an inch-wide strip from a baking powder can or from any other small round can. Then cut a half-inch strip. Use this for the handle. To put on the handle make two cuts crosswise in the inch piece. Cut open the half-inch strip. Slip one into the cuts and bend it up. Do the same thing on the opposite side.

The cutter can easily be bent to form a diamond, heart or star. One can will be enough for all of these.

MORE ABOUT REDUCING

The last time we were discussing reduction we said that the body acquired a certain amount of energy every day in the form of food. It also lost a certain amount of energy every day through work and exercise. If it acquires more than it expends the surplus energy becomes fat. This is as simple and absolute a rule as the fact that two and two make four, and there are no exceptions. That is why it is always possible to reduce either by eating less or by working more.

This brings us to the problem of how much to eat and what. There are some people who turn food into flesh quite easily, and others who can eat the same amount of the same sort of food, and stay thin, but this is not an exception to the rule that if you eat less you must reduce. For if the woman who grows fat on a certain amount a day eats less, if she exercises as much she will reduce because she will be consuming more than she is gaining. The woman who would stay thin on the diet that makes the fat woman fatter must eat more if possible, and if not must eat a different type of food.

That is the difficult part of any reduction; to know the things that will build flesh and the things that won't. From time to time I will give suggestions and lists of foods and menus. Meantime, I don't want any woman to feel that she cannot reduce if she tries. If she eats less than she needs she begins to consume her own superfluous flesh. If she does this gradually she can only benefit by it.

Rose L.:—If your cream is not smooth you must have overheated the oils, but this has not impaired its quality. There would be very little difference in the appearance of creams made from olive or almond oil.

Anxious:—I shall be glad to direct you in the selection of some of these books if you send me a stamped addressed envelope and repeat your request.

Susie:—The juice of either cucumber or lemon makes a good bleach for the skin.

Yugo:—Since your hair has lost this tendency to oilness there is no reason why you should shampoo oftener than once in three weeks. A very thin solution of gum tragacanth used when curling the hair helps to retain the curl for a time.

Brown Eyes:—Whiteheads should be treated first with peroxide of hydro- and then pricked with the point of a sterilized needle, when another application of peroxide should complete it.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

UNCOMFORTABLE AFTER MEALS?

Then Try a Pinch of Black-Draught. This White-Haired Alabama Lady Says It Helps Her.

Dutton, Ala.—In recommending Thedford's Black-Draught to her friends and neighbors here, Mrs. T. F. Parks, a well-known Jackson County lady, said:

"I am getting up in years; my head is pretty white. I have seen medicines and remedies come and go, but the old reliable came and stayed. I am talking of Black-Draught, a liver medicine we have used for years—one that can be depended upon and one that will do the work.

"Black-Draught will relieve indigestion and constipation if taken right, and I know, for I tried it. It is the best thing I have ever found for the full, uncomfortable feeling after meals.

"Sour stomach and sick headache can be relieved by taking Black-Draught. It aids digestion, also assists the liver in throwing off impurities. I am glad to recommend Black-Draught, and do, to my friends and neighbors."

For simple, common ailments, due to disordered stomach, liver and bowels, you will find Thedford's Black-Draught a useful and valuable remedy. The purely vegetable ingredients of which Black-Draught is composed gently stimulate the liver, increasing the flow of digestive juices, thereby helping to prevent or relieve constipation in an easy, natural way.

Insist upon Thedford's, the original and only genuine Black-Draught, powdered herb and root, liver medicine.—(adv.)

JOHNNY BUFF BARS HERMAN

New Orleans, La., June 2.—(Special.)—Johnny Buff, who holds both the flyweight and bantamweight championship titles, may be brought here for the opening show at the new coliseum arena the latter part of June. The promoters of the new club are angling for Buff's services, and have made overtures with those interested in the affairs of the champion to have him come here and box a ten-round no-decision contest.

Buff, according to Eddie Summers, Lewis Diamond's representative, who came here with Johnnie Drummie, is willing to meet any local bantamweight, Pete Herman excepted. It was the plan of the promoters to have Buff box Young Montreal here, but Summers stated that if Buff boxed here at all he preferred to meet some local boy.

Summers is expected to take the matter up with Diamond, Buff's manager, on his return from New York, and let the local fistic impresarios know something definite in the near future.

Buff won the title from Pete Herman, but evidently doesn't care for any more of Pete's games, since his manager stipulates that he is willing to meet any of the local boys excepting the former champion. Now the question arises as to who the promoters can get to meet Buff.

A match is in the air between Red" Watson, the local boy who made good his comeback by stopping Young Barrere recently, and Eddie Coulon. Coulon has an excellent chance for the match if he shows his old-time form against Watson.

Little Vs. O'Dowd.

Another match the new promoters had under consideration was a bout between "Happy" Littleton and Mike O'Dowd. It seems as if bringing the two together is going to be a hard task. Promoter Tortorich has Littleton signed up and the new promoters have an option on the services of O'Dowd, hence the split in brining the two together.

After the showing made by Buff here in his two scraps with George Lee, the Chinese bantam, and Frankie Mason, former flyweight champion, the new promoters believe that he would be a big drawing card. Buff's regime as bantamweight champion has not been very profitable to him so far. He has had tough luck, being forced to call off a number of scraps on account of illness. Not long ago, he was forced to call off a proposed bout with Joe Lynch. Pete Herman was on his trail at that time, but Herman had to return home also with an injured mitt.

LYNCH AGAIN THREATENING

New York, June 2.—The bantamweight championship is likely to become Joe Lynch's property again within a few months. Lynch demonstrated in his victorious bout with Midget Smith in the Garden Thursday night that he has returned to the old form of his brief championship days, and Johnny Buff, the champion, who was introduced from the ring, was a shocking sight to those who had seen him before his illness.

Buff, always a tiny, weazened man, looked drawn and weak as he took his bow. He will try himself out in a few weeks against Irish Johnny Curtin, a rough little slugger without much skill, and if he comes through, is expected to give Joe Lynch a chance to retrieve the title.

Even though Buff trains faithfully and convinces himself that he is as good as ever, it is not likely that he can become as strong as he was. Midget Smith has had this experience. Smith fought Lynch a furious draw and then gave Pete Herman a fearful drubbing early last winter. Then he got pneumonia and since recovering he has lost to Joe Burman, Lynch and some unknown local bantam.

Burman lisappeared after beating Smith, but in that fight he appeared to be the equal to Lynch and a likely conqueror of Buff, if given the chance.

FINALS TODAY IN FIELD MEET

Iowa City, Iowa, June 2.—With the shattering of a record in the javelin throw and brilliant performances in the other events, the western conference outdoor track and field championship meet opened here today. The finals will be decided tomorrow, with indications favoring victory for the University of Illinois team, winner of the 1921 big ten indoor and outdoor championship.

The strength of the Illinois team was revealed in the preliminaries when Milton Angier, Illinois javelin thrower, hurled the shaft 195 feet 3 3-4 inches for a conference record. The mark will stand as a record in the finals tomorrow unless it is bettered. Illinois started four runners in the 440-yard trials and all qualified.

Lieb, of Notre Dame, made the best heave in the discus throw, hurling the disk 147 feet, 8 inches. Five others qualified for this event.

GEORGIA GIVES "G'S" TO TENNIS TEAM

Athens, Ga., June 2.—University of Georgia "G" club and coaches have decided to give old english "G's" to Boykin Smith, of Macon, Charles Slack, of Gainesville, and Dave Collins, of Atlanta, winners in recent tournament here.

Smith and Slack were winners of the doubles, and Slack the singles. Smith, Slack, Collins and Edwin Everett of Atlanta, represented the university in tournament held in Atlanta.

THE SPORTSMAN

BY WALTER CAMP.

WHAT A TEST that will be at Poughkeepsie between the Annapolis and Cornell crews—a test of the low stroke against the high. At Philadelphia the Navy oarsmen showed they could hit up a high stroke; indeed, they kept the beat pretty well up to 38 for the first mile. Cornell on the Housatonic rowed nearly six points lower and went great guns.

SPEAKING OF THE Poughkeepsie race one may say that it grows in importance, while the New London regatta fades away. The Yale and Harvard crews have been beaten so much that little is left to attract the student of rowing speed and form. None the less, it will be a jolly scrap between two defeated eights. It will be interesting to see what Yale evolves out of the shifting of oarsmen and coaches.

NO HARM WAS done to interest in the sport of tennis by the close game Shimidzu, the Jap tennis star, played against Bill Tilden recently. Enthusiasm for this sport has never been so great, and the fact that Tilden is likely to be extended time and again will enhance this state of mind.

EVERYONE IS sending good luck wishes to Walter Hagen as he sails for the British open championship tourney at Sandwich. His last play here was at the West Chester Biltmore club, where he had a round of 73 in the morning and 74 in the afternoon over the long course.

HAGEN PLAYED IN the open British at Deal in 1920, and at St. Andrews in 1921, both times without success. He is one of our best golfers, but the fickle and tenacious breezes of the British courses have affected him no less than other American golfers, with the exception of Jock Hutchison, who is more of a foreign product than an American one.

WILLIS CUP PLAY IS ON

The qualifying round for the G. F. Willis tournament will be played today at Druid Hills and match play will start the first of the week. This tournament will last for two weeks. This will allow ample time for all matches.

In this tournament handicaps will apply in the qualifying round and in match play.

This is the second trophy that G. F. Willis has donated to the golfers of Druid Hills. The first tournament was held two years ago. There is a great deal of interest in this tournament and a large entry list is expected.

DISCREDIT REPORT OF RACE TROUBLES

Fort Worth, Texas, June 2.—Reports of a race riot at Kirvin, Texas, today were believed to have been exaggerated here tonight when a dispatch received here said that a mob of negroes believed to be in hiding at a house on the Powell farm, 4 1-2 miles south of Kirvin, could not be located.

The only casualty, the dispatch said, was Leroy Gibson, 19 years old, negro, who was killed when he attempted to escape from three deputy sheriffs after his arrest in connection with the murder of Miss Eula Awsley at Kirvin about six weeks ago. The crowds reported leaving Streatman, Wortham and Corsicana were not even organized, the dispatch stated.

Teague, Texas, June 2.—A crowd of men estimated at 500 left Teague at 7:25 o'clock tonight for a place near Kirvin, where it was reported seventy-five to one hundred negroes were preparing to march against the white residents of that section.

Deputy Sheriff John T. King and City Marshal Otis C. King, of Kirvin, with a posse of men, arrested Leroy Gibson, a negro, this afternoon at the home of Mose Gibson, about five miles north of Teague.

Three negroes in the house opened fire with rifles as they were leaving with the prisoner, the officers reported. During the battle Leroy Gibson was killed.

The officers said they were several hundred yards from the house at the time of the firing and were unable to defend themselves, being armed only with pistols. They crawled out of danger and came to Teague, where they communicated with Sheriff Mayo at Fairfield, to organize a posse.

Shortly after the shooting of the youth, between forty and sixty negroes are reported to have taken possession of a deserted house on the Powell farm, four and one-half miles south of Kirvin. They are said to be armed with rifles and to have threatened to resist any attempt of a crowd of whites to enter the house. Sixty whites joined deputy sheriffs at Kirvin and left for the farm. Other Kirvin citizens were reported to be on their way to assist in locating the negroes. Groups from Streatman, Wortham and Corsicana also are said to have left for the farm.

ALL QUIET AT KIRVIN.

Dallas, Texas, June 2.—Kirvin was quiet at 9:30 o'clock, according to a telephone message from that place. Details of the trouble were not known there, as the officers had not yet returned. It was reported, however, that two negroes are dead.

SEVEN ARE DROWNED WHEN BOAT CAPSIZES

Cle Elum, Wash., June 2.—Seven members of a crew working on a city pipe line on the Cle Elum river, five miles west of here, were drowned today when a rowboat in which they were attempting to cross the river was overturned. Two other occupants of the boat were rescued. None of the bodies were recovered.

Fight Postponed.

Philadelphia, June 2.—Rain today caused a postponement until Monday night of the eight round boxing bout between Lew Tendler, Philadelphia lightweight, and Bobby Barrett, of Clifton Heights, Pa. The fight was scheduled for tonight at the Philadelphia National league baseball park.

Claire Windsor, who plays the lead in "Brothers Under Their Skins," has been described as of "Swedish distraction" by a studio punster, who has managed thus far to evade capture by the Culver City police.

3 BALLOONS HAVE CHANCE

Chicago, June 2.—(By the Associated Press.)—Indications tonight were that an army, navy and independent balloon will represent the United States in the international balloon races in Switzerland.

The navy balloon piloted by Lieutenant W. F. Reed was the only one of the thirteen contestants that started in the national race from Milwaukee Wednesday still unaccounted for tonight and was believed to be somewhere over the Great Lakes region. Of the thirteen balloons, 12 were competing for the right to be selected among the three to represent the United States in the international races and two of the winners are thought to have landed today.

H. E. Honeywell, of St. Louis, an independent pilot, reported he had landed about twenty miles south of Joplin, Mo., after covering about 550 miles, while Major Oscar Westover, of Washington, piloting an army balloon, came down near Lake St. John, province of Quebec, Canada. According to Major Westover's message he landed Thursday, but as the distance is 900 miles, it is thought a mistake had been made and that he landed this morning as the speed of his balloon would have been about fifty miles an hour to have covered the distance by Thursday morning. This is considered improbable. Major Westover and Mr. Honeywell covered greater distances than any of the balloons landed.

Nothing has been heard of the balloon piloted by Lieutenant Reed since last night. If he makes a successful landing it is thought that his balloon will be one of the winners unless it runs into winds that force it back on its course.

Six of the original thirteen starters were unaccounted for early today but it was learned that Lieutenant-Commander J. P. Norfleet, piloting a helium filled navy balloon, had landed at Hancock, Mo., Thursday while Captain Harold E. Weeks, of the army, came down near Witt, Ill., and Ward T. Van Orman, Akron, civilian, landed Thursday night at Fayette, Mo.

FAIRFIELD FOUND GUILTY BY JURY

Cordele, Ga., June 2.—Omer Fairfield, charged with burning a trestle of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railway, of which he was formerly an employe, today was found guilty with recommendation, which means life imprisonment. The jury reached its verdict at 10 o'clock this morning, after having deliberated since early last night.

Fairfield received the verdict calmly and without any show of emotion. It is understood that his attorneys will immediately file a motion for a new trial. In the meantime, Fairfield will remain in the Crisp county jail.

Bridge burning in Georgia is a capital offense, therefore, the recommendation the jury coupled with its verdict saved the former A., B. & A. railway employe from a death sentence. The burning occurred last summer after a strike on the A., B. & A.

Arguments were begun yesterday and the case went to the jury at 6 o'clock. Court adjourned without taking up any other of the bridge burning cases.

STRIB GETS DECISION IN AMERICUS FIGHT

Americus, Ga., June 2.—(Special.) Young Stribling, Macon flash tonight won a decision in the Rylander theater here over Lary Avera, pride of Walk Miller's Atlanta stables. The fight was the first real boxing exhibition ever staged here and witnessed by approximately four hundred persons.

The judges were W. S. Kirkpatrick, editor of the Americus Times-Recorder; V. H. Gaines, an Americus sporting man; Jack Holst, director of manuel training in Americus public schools. John Gillespie, of Atlanta, refereed the match.

The big event on the card was the StriblingAvera match, and both men stepped into the ring apparently in the best of condition. The crowd was Stribling in the beginning, but Avera soon became a favorite and when the gong sounded at the end of the fight there were many who declared the Atlanta lad had bested his opponent during every round.

JUNE BRIDES RACE IN NUPTIAL HONORS

Knoxville, Tenn., June 2.—Five June brides engaged in competition here yesterday for a shower of wedding gifts offered by local advertisers. The offer was to the first bride of the month in the city.

Ruby Ferguson won. She married Ernest Messer and made the record complete in a minute and fifteen seconds. One pair of contestants were mutes.

PRESENT CHAMPIONS are in the habit of fighting all the men in their divisions who are least dangerous to their continuing to wear their respective crowns. Dempsey thinks now that Carpentier is a vastly improved fighter since his showing with Ted Lewis. Johnny Wilson's looking for someone easier than Harry Greb, may also be attributed to the following of the dictates of the safety-first motto.

AT THE PRESENT time most of the championship battles—or the ones that are billed as such—are between Battling Bunk and Kid Publicity, and the public continues to pay from one to eleven dollars for the privilege of being fleeced.

JOE LYNCH is fighting for another crack at the title that he lost a few months ago. In a 12-round battle with Midget Smith, the former bantam champion proved that he was still in the running and, as a result of this fight, he will likely get a crack at Johnny Buff for the crown. Buff was at the ringside, his first appearance in months.

THE FIGHT of the greatest interest to fans—the one between Harry Greb and George Carpentier—is now in the pugilistic pot boiling merrily. Many men who watch the trend of pugilistic happenings and the pulse of the fans, that this fight would draw more money at gate to rival the Dempsey-Carpentier fight of last year. It's a lead-pipe cinch that this would be a far better fight.

REGARDING HARRY GREB and his hitting. A few years ago, several of the writers panned Harry for failing to clip his opponents—and just to show that he had a punch, he went in and clipped a few of them in one round. Then he went back to his old style of fighting when he found that as a knockout he was less of an attraction. He has been clowning since—in fact, he has made clowning his profession, and that he is a successful clown is not to be denied.

MOST WRITERS think that Carpentier would kill Greb off in about five rounds. Georges has a punch—but he finds that he must set himself to deliver it. It is rather difficult to picture any fighters setting themselves for a punch with Greb after them. Gibbons couldn't do it, and neither could Tunney, and both can hit.

WHEN THE PAIR of Jacks came back from the Old World in such a hurry—things look promising for a fight in this class before long with Dempsey playing the lead. Looked as if the old bank roll began to flatten out on them—and when this happens, something must be done—promptly.

LANGFORD IS AFTER KAYO

BY MIKE THOMAS.

"Tham" Langford, ancient gladiator and veteran or more fights that he can number and in most of which he was returned winner will grab a tartar in Tiger Flowers in their scheduled 10-round match on Monday night at Ponce de Leon ball park. He will find a tartar because Flowers combines fighting and boxing to great advantage and the Boston Tar Baby is a fighter first, last and all the time.

The only chance that Tiger has with this gladiator is to stay away from him and box, for the very minute that Tiger gets in close it will be curtains for the dark battler from Brunswick. Langford hits harder than a Missouri mule ever thought of kicking, and he has this same kick in either hand. He seems to hit with his arms and shoulders alone—but these are enough, because Langfords shoulders are just about as broad as a door.

"Tham" is a peculiarly built fighter running to shoulders. He has the appearance of a peculiarly squat mountain and he hits with the speed and accuracy of a riveter. Very few of Sam's punches travel straight—he hooks them all—and when one of them lands solidly the show is usually over.

FLOWERS IN GREAT CONDITION.

Flowers has two advantages when he climbs into the ring with this old-timer. Tiger has youth and he has perfect condition. Whether these will be sufficient to stand off the assault of Langford remains to be seen, because every other advantage that is usually figured in a fight belongs to "Tham." Flowers has fought bigger men, but it is doubtful whether he ever fought a more finished ringman than Langford. He has never fought a man who could hit harder, nor a man who could stand up and take them like Sam.

BUCCANEERS NEARING TOP

Thanks to none of their own exertion the Pittsburg Pirates were a trifle closer to the top of the National league when Friday's returns were in, for the Giants lost another game to the Braves in Boston, 7 to 3, while the Pirates and Cardinals were held idle by rain in Pittsburg. The Giants appear to be in another road slump, and there is a lively chance of their being displaced in the lead for the first time since the season got under way, when they meet the Pittsburg team in New York.

The Dodgers and Phils also were idle because of rain. The Reds beat the Cubs 11 to 7 in Chicago, making 18 hits off four Chicago pitchers.

Rain stopped everything at the Polo grounds and the Yanks and Red Sox will play a double-header Saturday. The Athletics and Senators also were idle in Philadelphia. The Browns won their game with the White Sox in a rousing fourth inning when they scored seven runs. The final score was 12 to 4, although each team got 14 hits. The Indians beat the Ty Cobbless Tigers in Cleveland, 9 to 4.

Patricia Palmer, formerly prominent in Christie comedies, is to be starred in a new series of fun films made by an independent company.

SPRTS

NOW AND AGAIN a fighter pops up in some game to be mentioned in whispers of awe as a "murderous puncher." But the homicides of the ring are few and always accidental and most often are done by men who ordinarily can't hit a lick.

JESS WILLARD caused Bull Young's death, but when he fought Jack Johnson he had to wear him out in 26 rounds because he didn't have the punch to put him out. Neither could he stop old Frank Moran. Jack Dempsey is a much harder hitter and Jack has killed no man in the ring or out. Arthur Pelky, whose punch took the life of Luther McCarthy, never even hurt another man in his long and unhappy career after that. Al Roberts, who put over a fatal punch in a fight in the east a couple of years ago, has been flattened by both Gene Tunney and that so-called featherduster, Harry Greb.

TED-KID LEWIS was a terrific hitter in his best days and at least two boxers were almost blinded by his fierce wallops on the temple, affecting the optic nerve. Tom Burke, a St. Louis middleweight, got foggy vision and had to quit the ring after Lewis smashed him and Bob McCormick, from Lewis won the English light-heavyweight championship with a knockout, also had his vision seriously impaired by one punch.

BUT ONE FIERCE fight is likely to "soften" a boxer and make the toughest of them easy to beat. Eastern boxing fans will be watching Johnny Dundee the next time he fights a good tough puncher to see whether he was "softened" by the assaults he took from Lew Tendler in their recent 15-round fight. But Nelson was ripped apart in many hard fights, for the Bat did his blocking with his face and was never any good after Wolgast whipped him.

THAT'S ONE WAY to earn money, but there isn't enough in it to tempt most people. And there are easier ways of getting rich in the ring. Benny Leonard wears no busted nose or scrambled ear and Benny makes as much in two Garden fights as Nelson got in all his career.

Pegrom Is Winner.

Epsom Downs, Eng., June 2.—(By the associated Press.) — Viscount Astor's Pegrom, by Lemberg out of Popingoal, won the Oak states today. Sir. E. Hulton's Soubriquet, by Lemberg out of Silver Fowl, was second, and E. de St. Alary's Mysia, by Bachelor's Double, out of Mitylene, was third. Eleven horses ran.

OFFICER WINNER IN STRUGGLE FOR LIFE

Cleveland, Ohio, June 2.—Lieutenant James T. Neely, pilot of army balloon No. 5 in the national race, and his aide, James B. Jordan, won a desperate fight for their lives when they landed at Dover Village, west of here, last night after trying for eight hours to make a landing.

A terrific wind blowing from the east over the Great Lakes region is held by these flyers responsible for forcing them down together with Ralph H. Upson, of Detroit, and C. G. Andrus, of Washington, and at least four other balloons.

Upson and Andrus landed at Concord, Ohio, 5 miles southeast of Painesville, according to advices received here. From there they walked to Chardon, where they spent the night.

To keep from dropping into Lake Erie, Lieutenant Neely said he and his aide, both of whom are stationed at Ross field, California, threw out almost all of their food supply, cut loose all but two of the twenty-two sand bags of ballast they carried, threw overboard all of their instruments and even cut pieces from their fur coats and tossed them from the basket.

They first made several attempts to land at Ashtabula. The wind caught them, Neely said, and to save themselves from the lake, they began throwing food and other articles overboard. When the wind died down a bit they tried to land again, but the wind caught them and almost threw them into the water.

"That's when we put on our life belts," Lieutenant Neely continued. "For a minute or two we had just about resigned ourselves, but we made it. We cut pieces off our coats, threw our instruments away and up we went."

No one will be allowed to fish without a permit.

Fish may be taken only with pole, or rod and reel.

Limit of catch per day for any one person—Not over 10 rainbow trout, minimum length 9 inches; not over 15 bass, minimum length 9 inches; not over 20 bream; not over 25 mixed, which number must not exceed above limit for any one variety.

If fish smaller than those named in the schedule are caught, they must be released and immediately put back in the water.

Taking fish in any other way than herein specified is strictly prohibited. Any person violating any of the above conditions will be immediately ejected from the premises and permits revoked.

These rules are promulgated in the interest of sportsmanship.

Crackers Open Short Road Trip With Win;

John Suggs Pitches Great Game in Defeating Barons in Opener 10 to 3

Home Runs by Guyon, Smith and Mayer Feature Game—Guyon Hits Homer With Two on Base, as Does Smith.

Birmingham, Ala., June 2.—(Special.)—Burying Mike Eberhard alive under an avalanche of 17 safe swats for 27 bases, and 10 tallies, Bill Rariden's Crackers smothered the Barons Friday afternoon at Rickwood 10-3. During the hectic melee Catcher Smith, Big Chief Guyon and Samuel G. Mayer each took unto themselves some four-base brew, Smith and the Indian knocking their limit clouts out of the park, while the goose slammed his over Sump Clarke's head in left field.

Bits of sensational work afield were contributed by Ritter on short and Graff on third, as the long, drawn-out fracas worked itself to an ultimate climax. Otherwise, and aside from the three home runs the game was devoid of thrills.

In the second inning, Bernsen was first up, and he shot a single between first and second on the ground. Graff followed with a line drive to left and Clarkie rushed in on the ball, stabbing at it with one hand, and stopping it only partially. Bernsen took third and Graff was on second, when Smith—the man who was not good enough for Memphis—poked a healthy single to right and two men counted. Ritter popped up to third and Suggs hit into a double play, closing out the inning.

Suggs Pitches Well.

Suggs held the Barons hitless until the fourth. Clarke started the inning with a single over second, the first swat for the Barons. Taylor's best was a fly to the middle garden. Harper, however, crossed the Atlanta infield up, by delivering nicely with the hit and run, as the Crackers shifted for a steal by Clarkie. Silva's ground-doubled directly over third, brought Clarke home with the first Baron marker. Burkett popped to second, and Robertson, whom Suggs was attempting to purposely walk, reached out, and smacked one into the hands of Bernsen at first on a pitch-out.

In the fifth, Baronial bats, aided by a costly error on the part of Freddie Graff, sent two runners across and the locals enjoyed a brief 3-2 lead. Eberhard started the Barons half of the fifth by grounding out, but Stewart beat out an infield tap to short, and Neun crashed one between second and first for a safety. Clarke's sacrifice fly sent Stewart home, and Taylor chimed in with a grounder to Graff. Neun who was tearing into third, stopped dead in his tracks in an atempt to get Graff to chase him. Graff hesitated for a moment, and then shot the ball in the general direction of first, several thousand feet above Bernsen's head. Neun continued home with the run that placed Moley's men in the lead and Taylor camped on second. Harper went out via the aerial route to left.

Smith's Homer.

A sudden home run broke the morale of the Barons in the sixth, coming with two men on and being responsible for three tallies, which made the count 5-3 in Atlanta's favor. Bernsen and Graff singled to start the frame and Smith, the Memphis cast-off, then chalked his cue for a break shot over the right field walls. Neun dropped Eberhard's throw on Ritter's bunt, Suggs sacrificed Ritter to second, Klugman flied out to Harper in left, and Guyon struck out for the second time in as many innings.

In the eighth all hands batted around for the Crackers and by a vicious attack with the willow they put the game on ice beyond the shadow of a doubt. Smith started it with a single and Ritter lined out to short. Suggs went safe on a fielder's choice, when he forced Smith at second. Hock singled, moving Suggs over to third, and Klugman hit a pinch blow to the sun-parlor, which scored Suggs, with two on, Guyon then leaned mightily against a fast one and dropped it just over the walls in right, the circuit wallop netting three runs. Mayer then hit the second homer of the inning, hoisting it over Sump Clarke's bespectacled dome in left. Bernsen followed with a single, but Graff, the ninth man to face Eberhard in the inning, ended the agony by grounding out pitcher to first.

The second, and last game of the series will be staged at the "Wood" tomorrow afternoon, and Red Bates will probably be called upon to shoulder the pitching burden for the locals.

Bill Rariden's Record as Manager;

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY

Team Playing First Division Ball

This department is in receipt of a letter, which isn't exactly an extraordinary occurrence. It often is.

But this letter is different. It was written by a man who evidently doesn't believe that Bill Rariden, who recently took over the managerial reins of the Crackers, is doing any better with the outfit than did Roy Ellam during the latter's rather brief regime.

The writer of the communication has the following to say:

"Note that you believe the Crackers are in for a run of victories. I hope so, but have failed to see where Bill Rariden has set the woods on fire since he took command. His showing has not been a whit better than Ellam made. I believe, however, that Spiller is going to have a winner before the season is over.
(Signed) "R. N. A., Atlanta."

Mr. R. N. A. and the writer share the belief that President Spiller will have a winner before the curtain rings down. This correspondent will even go Mr. R. N. A. one better. He believes the winner has arrived.

We differ with the writer of the epistle over Bill Rariden's showing. We believe Bill has worked wonders with the outfit, else the Crackers would be several games below the Lookouts instead of a few games above.

Records prove that if the Crackers had won the same percentage of games under Ellam's administration as they have under Rariden's, Atlanta fans would not be making excuses for their ball team. The club would not be so far from the top.

The real truth of the matter is that Rariden has had charge of sixteen games since putting on the managerial toga. Of that number eight have been copped and the same number dropped. Twelve, or three-fourths of the games, were played on foreign soil and an even break was the result.

The opposition, has been just about the toughest in the league, the Barons, the Travelers, the Chicks and the Vols being the teams played since Rariden took a hand in proceedings. New Orleans, badly crippled, would have been easy meat and had the Lookouts been faced for a series, Bill's average might have been much higher. The Mobile Bruins were the only powerful aggregation not taken on by Atlanta during the half-month.

The locals have gone up a matter of approximately 75 points in the percentage table during this time. Everything considered, then, Rariden has had considerable success with a team regarded as hopelessly outclassed.

MACON JOINS IN BARRING O'DOWD.

Troubles continue to pile up for little Timmie O'Dowd, who so far forgot his ring manners some weeks ago that he rattled a wicked right off Referee Glynn's jaw after the official had rendered a decision O'Dowd thought was unfair.

Timmie drew a three months' suspension from the boxing board of the Atlanta post of the American Legion and was forced to seek other communities as fighting sites. To date O'Dowd hasn't been landing jobs with the regularity of old and from reports gathered from various places, he isn't going to do a whole lot of fighting until his local suspension is lifted.

The Joseph N. Neel, Jr., post at Macon is the latest to come through with the announcement that Timmie's services are not wanted. Bibb county fans want no more of O'Dowd until he is taken back into the fold by the Atlanta post. A copy of a letter sent to O'Dowd's manager, James A. Mayson, by Mike Witman, chairman of the sports committee, carries the information that there is nothing for Timmie in Macon until he completes his sentence.

It seems that Young Dempsey, the Memphis bantam, and O'Dowd are keen to renew their struggle with Macon customers furnishing the receipts. It probably is a battle which would draw well in Bibb's capital city, as O'Dowd was a great card.

The thing was just about hatched up and final arrangements were contained in a letter Mayson wrote the Macon post. But there the proceedings stopped.

Here is the communication: "We have been requested by the Atlanta post of the American Legion to withhold any engagements from Tim O'Dowd until the suspension they have placed upon him is lifted.

"It is the view of our committee that we should act in accord with the Atlanta post in condemning the unsportsmanlike conduct that he indulged in when he struck the referee after the Pal Moore fight. As soon as the suspension is lifted we will be pleased to negotiate with you relative to a return match with Young Dempsey. (Signed) Mike Witman."

Co-operation between legion posts of the state will help to no little degree in keeping the game on a high plane.

Miller Wins, 7-3.

Boston, June 2.—Miller, pitching his first home game, was effective except in one inning today and Boston won from New York, 7 to 3.

After five hits and an error had given Boston four runs in the fourth with none out, Causey relieved Shea and retired the side without further scoring. Cruise made two sensational catches.

Reds Beat Cubs.

Chicago, June 2.—Cincinnati pounded Chicago's pitchers for 18 hits including home runs by Caveney and Duncan and made it two straight from the locals 11-to-7 today. Gillespie gave way to pinch hitter when the Reds staged a rally which gave them the lead and Couch held the locals safe until the ninth when Chicago launched a belated rally.

Ball Players Only Human In Spite of Beliefs To the Contrary By Fans

If Johnson Tempered Justice With Mercy, All Right, Says Hugh; But If the Financial End Entered, All Wrong.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Babe Ruth's latest (and, it is to be hoped, last) outbreak has aroused a storm of debate all around the circuit. The verdict of President Johnson in letting Ruth off with a $200 fine and one day of suspension started even more argument. The belief that Ruth should be curbed and that he has come to think that he is more important than baseball itself has caused this resentment, which, in part, is justified and in part entirely wrong.

Ruth lost his head and started to battle someone, starting with the umpire. Now, consider the situation from a purely human standpoint, forgetting that Babe is a star of a ball player. Put yourself in his position. Suppose you had wagered a large sum of money on a horse race and just received word that the horse had lost. Suppose that you made a base hit, tried to stretch it into a two-bagger and been caught. Suppose that, after being called out and having flared up at the umpire you started back to the bench and someone yelled that you were a big bum.

I leave it to you what the reaction would be.

Personally, I'm a mild-mannered person, and not inclined to get mad about anything, but under such a combination of circumstances I am inclined to think that I would blow up the grandstand and try to lick Jack Dempsey.

PLAYER IS ONLY HUMAN.

Babe, of course, should not have cut up that way, but the riding the cheap, picking sports gave him (and perhaps will continue to give him) was worse than anything he ever did. Besides a ball player, in some ways, is a human being, and it is pretty rotten sportsmanship for 10,000 persons to start after one fellow—no matter what he has done.

I remember Jimmy Connor once tried to tear down a grandstand and lick everyone in it. Connor was one of the most even tempered, nice fellows the game ever knew, and not at all inclined to be belligerent. One day in Chicago Jim had a bad day, which grew worse steadily. He kicked seven or eight balls, and the crowd got started after him, and was hooting and jeering. Finally, just at the close of the game, he made a rush and tried to climb into the stands. His fellow players held him back, and even after that he was raving and fighting to get at someone in the stands.

None of us could understand his actions, and finally I inquired.

"Did you hear him?" Jim demanded.

"I heard a lot—"

"But did you hear what that big fellow said? He got up, stretched and said, 'Cononr, you're a disgrace to the Irish.' "

While there is no doubt that President Johnson's action in making the punishment of Ruth as light as possible, will and should be applauded by the majority of fans, the motives for the lightening of the punishment offer a different idea. If Johnson tempered justice with mercy, all right. But the evidence is that Johnson made the punishment light, not on account of any sympathy for Ruth, but because the fact that Ruth might be out of the game would hurt attendance at Washington. The statement is made that Clark Griffith appealed to Johnson in the name of the Washington club to let Ruth by and help the gate receipts.

Now, if Ruth deserved sympathy and mercy, it was fine. But if the punishment is to be light because of the gate receipts, it is all wrong.

SUCCUMB TO GAMBLING.

James L. Joyce.—Replying to your query: Yes, it is possible to beat races. There are several ways of doing it. There is a time in every man's life, if he bets on races when he is ahead of the game. If he is lucky enough to drop dead at that minute he can beat them. Any human man above average intelligence who will go to a race track, spend twelve to fifteen hours a day watching and studying the horses, and then will play only races in which he knows the horses, and will not gamble, will make money. In the last thirty years I have known four men who could do that. All the others are losers or will be.

Nature does not make men so that they will stick to conservative wagering and getting ahead, they succumb to the gambling instinct and go broke.

Replying to the second part of the query, I find that it fits right in with the first. Pari-mutuel betting is better for the casual bettor than straight booking system. The odds are better, the place and show betting much better. The outsider has a fair show. But that system of betting invariably wipes out the cash capital at tracks. No game in the world can stand a 6 per cent rakeoff. The "kitty" eats up the whole game.

Where you seem to get confused is in arguing that, if the pari-mutuel odds are better than the odds laid by bookmakers, the bookmakers would eat up the game faster than the mutuels would. In arithmetic this would be true, but as a matter of fact, practically every bookmaker, when he gathers in the roll, becomes a gambler and plays the money back into the game. The mutuels take the money out permanently, or at least the greater part of it.

If the bookmaker who lays lower odds was content with his profits and would take his earnings home and keep them, the cash capital of the race tracks would be eaten up in a month.

Nothing proved more conclusively that the sucker, or outside, money is not great enough to keep the working capital up in the face of a constant drain than Maryland racing did this spring. With twenty millions wagered, and the rake-off being about $1,000,000, betting fell off steadily during the entire Maryland season, because the bulk of the coin had gone into the kitty of the mutuel machines, and not enough fresh capital was being dragged in to hold up the sport.

Pels Defeat Bears.

New Orleans, June 2.—New Orleans won a bitterly fought ten-inning game from Mobile here this afternoon, 3 to 2. Errors gave the visitors a run in their eighth and in their ninth they tied the score with another run which resulted from an error. In the locals' tenth after Henry had cracked out his fourth straight clean single and had advanced to second on a sacrifice by Dowie, Ralph Miller, Pelican southpaw, won his own game with a clean single to center, scoring Henry and breaking up the game.

Nashville Wins, 6-5.

Nashville, June 2.—Knaupp's single in the eleventh scored Morse, who had doubled, giving Nashville the first game of the series from Chattanooga, 6 to 5. Drake pitched masterly ball and was entitled to a shutout, but his defense went to pieces in the seventh when Nashville made 5 runs, Morse stealing home. In the tenth Boone was put in to run for Kress, who had singled, and reached second on an infield out. Drake hit a long single to right. Boone leisurely trotted home and Drake was thrown out at second before Boone crossed the plate.

PRES. MARTIN MAKES PECULIAR RULING

Memphis, Tenn., June 2.—Yesterday's game between the Little Rock and Memphis Southern association teams was formally protested today by President R. G. Allen, of the Little Rock club on the grounds that Spencer Abbott, non-playing manager of the Memphis club, appeared on the playing field, it was announced today by John D. Martin, league president. The protest was disallowed, Mr. Martin stated, on the ground that there is not rule in force covering the point.

However, Mr. Martin reprimanded Abbott, calling attention to the fact that he had no right on the playing field at any time.

MISS STIRLING HERE TODAY

Miss Alexa Stirling, former national woman's golf champion and present holder of the Metropolitan Woman's title, will arrive in Atlanta today for a visit to her parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Stirling, at East Lake.

Miss Stirling is at present selling bonds for S. W. Strauss & Co., brokers, and in connection with her visit to Atlanta she will handle some of the details of the placing of the bond issue for the M. Rich & Bros. Co. now store that is being handled by her firm.

Miss Stirling went with the Strauss firm at the close of last years' tournament season and she has not visited Atlanta since this time. She is making her home on Long Island with Mrs. J. J. Windel. In the Metropolitan tournament this spring she played as a member of the North Hempstead Country club.

Miss Stirling on last Thursday defeated Miss Glenna Collett, of Providence, at Nassau, 3 and 2, in which the Atlanta star shot an excellent 82.

JOHN J. DUBB WINS AT LAST

BY MIKE THOMAS.

John J. Dubb, golf teacher and sport editor of The Journal, has lost the title that he boasted of for years, "The World's Worst Golfer," and the crown now adorns the brow of George Eckford, at The Georgian. Dubb was a last-minute arrival in the championship flight of the newspapermen's golf tourney, and with his magnificent handicap of 30 strokes—which was not needed in his first match—arrived in the flight just before dark, crowding out Oscar Keeler, The Journal golf writer.

Possibly the atmosphere had something to do with Eckford's defeat by the ruinous score of 10 and 8—certainly something threw him off his game, because George has always admitted, that he could and would play the game providing the stakes were high enough. Possibly he envied the title that Dubb has held for so long a time, and wanted this title more than a paltry championship of the newspapermen's fraternity of Atlanta, even though the title carries with it the possession of the Southeastern Enterprise trophy.

John J. Dubb, however, on the strength of his defeat of Eckford claims a new accomplishment. He claims that he is the only man in tournament play outside the story books who ever won ten straight holes in an eighteen hole match, and he intends to reward this claim in the Smithsonian Institution.

DUBB'S GOLFING COSTUME APPROPRIATE.

Dubb arrived at the Piedmont course shortly after noon attired in a nifty set of rubber knickers, which he stated were imported from Greenland especially for this match. These extended from slightly below his knees to his arm pits, and for the weather nothing could have been more appropriate. Whether this costume contributed to Dubb's game or not he would not say, but the fact remains that Dubb's medal for the first nine was a 49, and he made a par 4 on the tenth hole to end the match.

Eckford shot an erratic game in one particular, but a steady game in another way. There was no hole on the course that George played in less than 10—and if this is not consistency, we stand corrected.

After Dubb put down his last putt in the match, Eckford proceeded to break a club, and walk off the course. He was pursued by a number of sporting writers who were anxious to get his version of the rout, but his golf had evidently sapped his strength, and for once in his life Eckford was speechless.

ONE OTHER FIRST ROUND MATCH PLAYED.

Pat Hammond, representing the standard southern newspaper, was returned winner in the other first round match played yesterday, by the score of 6 up and 5 to play. His opponent was Johnny Outler, automotive editor of The Journal. This match was played during the morning. Hammond gave his opponent five strokes.

TIGER BOSS REINSTATED

Chicago, June 2.—Ty Cobb and Harry Heilmann, of the Detroit club of the American League, who were suspended following an argument during a game at St. Louis, were reinstated this afternoon by Ban Johnson, president of the league, and will be eligible to play tomorrow, Mr. Johnson announced. His decision on the case will be handed down in a few days, he said.

Shiloh Wins Two.

Shiloh, Ga., June 2.—Shiloh defeated Warm Springs yesterday and today in two fast games of baseball. Score first game, 9 to 1. Second, 9 to 4. Features of the games pitching of Hudson and catching of Barnes for Shiloh, who threw out seven runners trying to steal second and the general fast playing of all Shiloh players. Three double plays being made in today's game. Batteries first game, Shiloh, Hudson and Barnes; Warm Springs, Hancock and Layfield. Second, Moore and Barnes, Morgan and Layfield.

Lyman to Manage.

Sewanee, Tenn., June 2.—Guy Lyman, of New Orleans, has been elected by the athletic board of control manager of the University of the South football team for the 1922 season, and S. H. Schoolfield, Jr., Mullins, S. C., editor of the Sewanee Purple.

BAILEY WILL AID PELICANS

New Orleans, June 2.—(Special.)—Johnny Dobbs can afford to shift all of his activities to other departments of the Pelican roster in the hope of getting right close to the top of the Southern league pennant race. Heretofore Dobbs has received little or no assistance from what was regarded the best twirling staff in the Martin circuit.

Return of Abe Bailey, the big right-hander, who was stretched out on the ineligible list because of his failure to get in condition, means that Dobbs at last has a pitcher who is able to work every fourth day and come pretty close to winning his game.

Bailey has twirled sixteen innings in two games since rejoining the Pels. In the two battles he allowed one run. That came Tuesday at Memphis and only through an error of his teammates. In the sixteen innings Bailey has given up only nine hits, which is ample proof of his comeback.

It probably won't be very long now before the fans may be hailing Bailey as the slab star of the Southern league. That Bailey has a curve ball and knows how to throw it is admitted. His principal weakness, according to some of the fans, was that of failing to be ready for the kickoff on April 3.

Bailey's showing is similar to that of last year when he came to the Pels. The Birmingham club got hold of Abe's offerings one Sunday and slaughtered him. Abe, however, got in form and towards the close of the season was Dobbs' most dependable pitcher.

Of the entire staff, Bailey is perhaps the best man. Sooner or later the fans will realize that Heinemann has a great minor league slabman. His work during the balance of the season no doubt will be closely observed by those who predicted that his arm was gone and various other things due to his failure to win games.

Bailey is the type of pitcher who thrives on work. It might come to pass that Dobbs is of the same opinion and that Abe will be on the mound in every fourth game.

WILLIAMS HITS FOURTEENTH

St. Louis, June 2.—Ken Williams, the Browns walloping outfielder, forged ahead of Rogers Hornsby, the Cardinals' home-run specialist, in the race for the season's home run championship, when he smacked out his fourteenth of the year in the fourth inning of the Browns-White Sox game here Friday. There was nobody on base at the time. Ferdie Schupp, the recent come-back was pitching for the Sox at the time.

Hornsby has 13 homers and Bing Miller, the Athletics outfielder has a dozen.

Williams is still behind Ruth's rate for 1921. The bam had 14 homers on May 29 last season and on June 3 he made his sixteenth.

SPEECH AND PIANO MUSIC SCHEDULED

Colonel Lyons to Give Address on Jefferson Davis—Miss James to Give Program.

Piano solos, by Miss Grace James, who has been received favorably several times before when she played for The Constitution Radio service, and an address on Jefferson Davis by Colonel J. Colton Lynes on the occasion of the birthday anniversary of the former president of the confederacy, will be featured at 6 o'clock Saturday evening by WDAW, the station of the

MISS GRACE JAMES.

Georgia Railway & Power Co., broadcasting for The Constitution.

Colonel Lynes' address will open the broadcasting period. Colonel Lynes is especially well-equipped to deliver an address on Jefferson Davis, having done so last year, on June 3, at the request of Mrs. William A. Wright, before the ladies' Memorial association.

At the first celebration of Jefferson Davis' birthday anniversary in Atlanta, Colonel Lynes was marshal of the day and this makes it appropriate that he should make the address.

Miss James, whose program will follow the address by Colonel Lynes, has always been warmly received by radio enthusiasts. All of her numbers so far have been popular ones and it is a program of popular music that she has arranged for tonight.

Pretty Fair.

FIFTEEN MINUTES OF RADIO EACH DAY

BY EDWARD N. DAVIS

Formerly Technical Electrical Expert for United States Government

LESSON NO. 59—SAVING LIVES BY RADIO

Disastrous Wreck of London-Paris Airplanes.

The first collision of express planes in the air and the resulting loss of lives in the flaming wreckage, brings vividly to mind the necessity of radio equipment in air transportation to safeguard the lives of the passengers and pilots.

Seventy miles north of Paris, over the village of Thieulloy, a British plane, manned by a pilot and carrying mail, crashed into a French airplane in which was a pilot, mechanic and three passengers. The planes had been traveling at terrific speed, completely engulfed in a sea of fog, and after colliding, both fell to earth, the aviators and passengers perishing in the burning remnants of the luxurious airships.

Disasters in fogs are not unusual, but in operations on sea and land the use of sound signals and powerful lights prevents to a great degree such unfortunate happenings and their consequent loss of life.

The high speed of airplanes, commonly 100 miles an hour, places them outside the range of sound instruments or brilliant lights which penetrate fog but a short distance. Radio waves, however, travel at a speed of 300 million meters of 186,000 miles per second, their action is instantaneous and they radiate in all directions like ripples resulting from the impact of a stone on the surface of a quiet pool of water. A few lengths of wire stretched from end to end of the airplane, small adjustable coils and condensers connected to that radio marvel the "vacuum tube" form a combination by which the pilots of passenger-carrying airplanes can send out radio signals in the directions through an impenetrable fog. Powerful land stations sending warnings of dangerous storms will enable the pilot to alter his course and bring the plane and air voyageurs to a safe landing at their destination

Train Wrecks Can Be Prevented by Wireless.

The marvelous developments in radio are logical grounds for a prediction that in the near future terrible collisions on our railroads will be eliminated through the constant and direct communication by radio between the train dispatcher and the locomotive engineer. The installation of a delicate instrument which responds only to a certain electrical wavelength would allow the dispatcher to signal out any locomotive on the system. Only a short time ago the interstate commerce commission ordered the installation of automatic stops on some of the eastern railroads, to prevent the passing of danger signals. Is it not possible that through the recent wonderful developments in wireless that the government will order railroad trains to be provided with railroad equipment so that, day or night, the dispatcher's voice, carried on the wireless wave, can warn the engineer of a danger toward which the train is rushing at mile-a-minute speed?

To the uninitiated a reference to wavelength in radio is a vague electrical term. As in water waves, it is the distance from crest to crest of the electrical oscillations. The rapidity with which short waves vibrate is almost incomprehensible, for example, waves of 299 meters in length used by amateurs, oscillate at the rate of 1,500,000 times in one second. The length of waves is expressed in meters, one meter has a length of three and one-quarter feet. Long waves vibrate more slowly, at a rate of 20,000 times per second. Long waves are generally used for transoceanic communication, while short waves are used by amateurs and for broadcasting the popular concerts and speeches.

(At the Lyric.)

The show for the last three days of the week at Keith's Lyric theater, is a pleasing and highly entertaining program of talented acts, the topline feature is presented by The Big City Four, a quartette of male singers with good voices, good song selections and their harmony singing and solos are especially pleasing.

A lively comedy skit with songs is presented by Hampton and Blake, and is called the second edition of "Peaucoup Nuisance," it is a spicy and refreshing comedy act written along clever lines and remarkably carried out by this talented couple.

Reed and Tucker are a pair of very versatile entertainers, who sing, dance and play the violin in a very effective manner.

Other good acts are Perez and Marguerite comedy and novelty jugglers, and Anna Vivian and company in a sensational shooting novelty.

Loew Vaudeville.

(At the Grand.)

In order to accommodate the big Saturday patronage the Loew's Grand theater is offering today four complete shows of vaudeville and feature pictures, starting at 2, 4, 7 and 9 p. m. The headline feature is Boganny's Comedians, in "Schoolroom Days." These jolly fellows, eight in number, including three midgets, come to Atlanta direct from the New York Hippodrome, and have an act that has won success in almost every country in the world. Knockabout acrobatics and slapstick comedy were never better presented than by these clever comedians.

Quinn and Caverly also have an act called "Town Topics," that fairly sparkles with humor from start to finish. Other offerings are Page and Gray in a concoction of wit and humor, Mack and Deane in musical selections and comedy chatter, and the Roma Duo in whirling dances. The feature of the screen bill is Eileen Percy in "Elope if you Must."

PIEDMONT PARK RADIO CONCERTS ON MONDAY

residents in the Piedmont park section have been mystified by the notes of the great organ, coming apparently from nowhere. In a like manner voices of unseen people were heard through the greater part of the park. It was the testing of the apparatus.

"The plan, I think, is one of the best that has been inaugurated since the enthusiasm over radio began," Mr. Sheldon said yesterday. "It means that many thousands of Atlanta people will be able to enjoy the recitals on Sunday afternoon in a beautiful park. Of course, I'll have my audiences at the Auditorium for those who find it more convenient to come there. But there are many people who spend Sunday afternoons in Piedmont park and to them it will mean the opening of a new musical feature for their pleasure.

Takes Recital to People.

"I don't know of anything which could better make the municipal organ recital each week of more benefit to the people. It means the bringing of the recital to them, instead of their coming to the recital.

"Of course, the larger my audience is the more I enjoy giving the recital. When The Constitution began to broadcast the organ recitals, it meant added pleasure for me, because day after day I received cards and letters from people far away in other states, and that meant that there must be thousands of people over a large territory who have heard and are hearing regularly the music which before was reserved for Atlanta people.

"Now, this plan of The Constitution's means that more Atlanta people than ever will be able to hear the recital, and the fact that it is to be started soon is a source of real gratification to me."

People riding in their automobiles Sunday will be able to hear the music as they drive through the park, bathers in the big Piedmont park pool will enjoy the music and strollers will receive it. It means that Atlanta's greatest municipal music treat will be sent into the open air, and that it is for every one who wants to listen.

Latest Devices Used.

The loud speaker which The Constitution will use is one of the latest to be put on the market. It is made by the Western Electric company and is the result of five years' experimenting in this field. It is all that a loud speaker should be, for not only does it amplify the music so that it can be heard the length of a city block, but as well retains the true quality of the music as it is given to it. There is no metaillic sound, the horn part being made of fiber. There is no distortion. The music is faithfully amplified and all tone qualities retained.

New amplifiers for the transmitting phase of the project have been designed and the tests conducted during the last week proved them to be all and even more than the experts believed was possible in them. Intricate coils, condensers and three sets of batteries are used in them. The vacuum tube of the power type is also a part.

With this sort of the equipment success of The Constitution's project for giving the municipal organ recital to thousands on Sunday at Piedmont park is assured. The tests proved that.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS!

Radio Editor: Will I hear the broadcasting with a crystal set if I connect it to the binding post of the door bell as an aerial? It is impossible for me to use an outdoor aerial on account of the landlord's objections.
J. E. C.

If your bell wire is located in the right place, and if it happens to be somewhere near the right length, it might make a fair aerial over which you could hear the concerts. Try it and see for yourself.

Radio Editor: Would it reduce the efficiency of a coil if I gave it a coat of shellac? What is the best size of wire for winding variometer coils?
R. C.

The shellac will reduce the efficiency of your coil slightly, but it will help to hold the wire in place. No. 22 or 24 wire will do for the variometer coils.

OFFICERS PLEDGE FULL CO-OPERATION

clination of the returned soldier to work, said Judge Sibley, because most of them do not have such inclination. "I am not unmindful that they may say they were out of jobs and out of touch with their former work, but there is the trouble.

"I very much fear that this indiscriminate soldier bonus is just going to add to a little flame. I am very much afraid that it is not only going to confirm them in the belief that we are entitled to be supported without work, but to confirm the habit of getting support in that way."

King Speaks.

The resolutions adopted by the district attorneys and solicitors-general of Georgia pledged them to eliminate duplicate prosecution for the same crime. Judge Alex. C. King of federal circuit court pleaded for co-operation between state and federal courts.

Mob violence was denounced by Judge Nash R. Broyles, of the Georgia court of appeals, who declared that "The greatest cloud upon our state and national horizon is the frequent acts of lawlessness, especially manifested in mob acts and lynchings." He pleaded for "speedy trials" as a remedy.

Harrison Elected.

Colonel Z. D. Harrison, of Atlanta, for thirty-two years treasurer of the Georgia Bar association, was elected president of the organization. He was chosen by acclamation. Colonel Harrison has been clerk of the supreme court of Georgia for fifty years.

The nominating committee also named the following other officers: First vice president, William M. Howard, Augusta; secretary, Harry S. Strozier, the present secretary; treasurer, Logan Bleckley, Atlanta. The list of officers with a vice president from each congressional district were elected.

Appointment was announced of the following delegates to the American Bar association meeting: R. C. Alston, Atlanta; H. S. Strozier, Macon, and Rollin H. Kimball, Winder.

Delegates Named.

Delegates to the conference of the bar association are T. A. Hammond, Atlanta; O. A. Park, Macon; R. M. Hitch, Savannah. The legislative committee: W. B. Parks, Dawson; A. A. Lawrence, Savannah; J. A. Pottle, Albany.

George S. Jones, of Macon, spoke this afternoon on "Business Methods in the Lawyer's Office."

New Members received into the Georgia Bar association this morning are: Guy Alford, Swainsboro; H. L. Rogers, Ocilla; J. Saxton Daniel, Claxton; W. R. McDonald, Augusta; B. B. Cubbedge, Jr., Savannah; V. B. Moore, Atlanta, and Eugene Pollard, Savannah.

Text of Resolution.

The resolution adopted by state and federal officers follow:

"Resolved, by the meeting of the United States district attorneys, solicitors-general and solicitors of city and county courts, That we approve the suggestions contained in the letter of Attorney-General Daugherty to the attorney-general of Georgia, and especially elaborated in the very able speech of United States Judge Samuel H. Sibley.

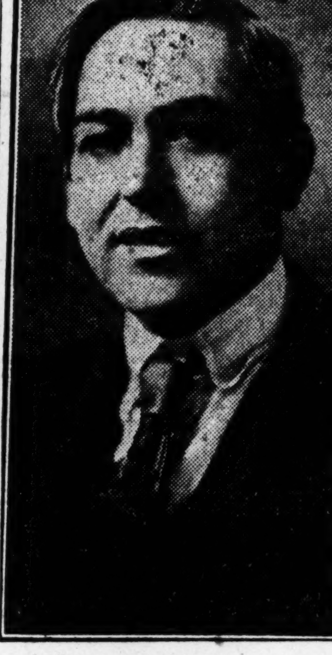

"We pledge ourselves to the principle of co-operation in the enforcement of the laws where federal and state courts have concurrent jurisdiction, and in so enforcing the law and to eliminate duplicate prosecution for the same transaction, and in such manner as to promote the greatest efficiency of the courts."

The Solicitors-General association held its annual banquet in a private dining room at Hotel Tybee this evening.

Congressional district vice presidents were nominated as follows by district from the first to the tewlfth inclusive: A. B. Lovett, Savannah; J. H. Linton, Sylvester; W. B. Parks, Dawson; W. G. Love, Columbus; Charles B. Skelton, Atlanta; Charles Akerman, Macon; G. A. H. Harris, Jr., Rome; W. M. Howard, Augusta; Millard Reese, Brunswick; A. S. Bradley, Swainsboro. Executive committee, Hal Lawson, Abbeville, chairman; G. C. Grogan, Elberton; H. H. Swift, Columbus, and B. W. Fortson, Arlington.

WOOD TO ANNOUNCE FOR LEGISLATURE

J. O. Wood, councilman from the second ward, and a member of the law firm of Hutcheson, Wood, Morris & Joyner, will shortly announce his candidacy for the legislature from Fulton county subject to the democratic primary. Mr. Wood said Friday that he was giving the matter serious consideration and probably would issue a statement within a few days.

COUNCILMAN J. O. WOOD.

"If I am elected to the legislature," said Mr. Wood, "I shall endeavor to secure enactment of legislation abolishing capital punishment in the state of Georgia, a law making carrying of concealed weapons a felony and the abolition of all semi-penal institutions not directly under control of officers and agents of the state.

"Capital punishment is fast coming to be looked upon as not only a menace but an obsolete form of penal administration. The carrying of concealed weapons, due to the fact that it is now a misdemeanor and punishable by fine, is an important contributing factor in the increase in crime in this state, and I believe a law making it a felony punishable with imprisonment, will go far toward reducing the evil and cutting down the number of homicides and murders committed annually within our borders. Men will not be so handy with a gun when they know a jail is staring them in the face.

"Authority to send delinquents, especially girls, to institutions not under control of the state, but directed by some religious or sectarian body, has caused many superior court judges to send mere children to these institutions not only in the state, but often to distant cities outside of Georgia, where they are absolutely out of the jurisdiction of the Georgia courts.

"Georgia needs a law forbidding the courts to send these delinquents to such institutions as well as a statute making it unlawful for delinquents from other states being sent to semi-penal institutions here. I shall endeavor to obtain enactment of such a law, if I am elected by the people of Fulton county."

SKYLIGHT BURGLAR NOW SAFE IN JAIL, DECLARE OFFICERS

William Eden, 16-year-old youth, whose residence is given as 162 Formwalt street, is the burglar who specializes in skylight entrances, according to City Detectives E. M. Cason and W. D. McGee, who arrested him Friday morning in connection with the recent burglary of the department store of F. O. Watson company, at 124-26 Whitehall street.

Detective Cason claims to have sufficient evidence to show that Eden is the one who entered the establishment, but believes that he has accomplices whom they are endeavoring to locate.

Another youth, S. E. Merriam, 18 years old, of Lithonia, Ga., was taken into custody by the same officers and is being held, suspected of being implicated in various robberies. He will be subjected to a grilling, following which an investigation of his movements will be made.

WHEAT AND CORN PRICES DECLINE

Chicago, June 2.—Despite less favorable domestic crop reports, the wheat market here sagged in price today, owing largely to lower quotations at Liverpool and to assertions that European holidays tomorrow and Monday would tend to curtail export demand. The closing in Chicago was steady, but was 1-8 to 1 1-2 cent net lower, with July $1.18 1-4 to $1.18 3-8, and September $1.17 3-8 to $1.17 1-2. Corn finished a shade to 3-4 cent off, oats at 1-8 cent decline to a like advance, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2 1-2 cents.

Successive dips and bulges in the price of wheat followed each other rapidly throughout the day, the bearish foreign news being at times outweighed by confirmation of black rust in Texas and by advices telling of blight in parts of Kansas and of threatened damage elsewhere in the winter crop belt. On the other hand, seaboard messages said that resellers at Liverpool were offering hard winter wheat to 3 cents cheaper than was asked in cablegrams from this side of the Atlantic, and that the German government buying agency had withdrawn from the market.

Domestic mills took a fair quantity of wheat here and receipts at Chicago continued to dwindle, arrivals today being only 23 cars. Primary receipts for the country as a whole were less than was the case a year ago. Such bullish factors, however, were more or less counterbalanced by word of increased shipments from Argentina, about three times larger for the week as compared with the corresponding period last year.

Corn weakened with wheat, notwithstanding gossip of export sales of corn totalling one million bushels. Good shipping demand helped to uphold the oats market. An increase of lard stocks here had something of a bearish influence on the provisions market.

AMERICAN EXCHANGE

New York, June 2.—(Special.)—The following were ruling prices on the American Cotton and Grain Exchange, Inc., today:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. Close.
January	19.76	20.15	19.69	20.16	19.86
March	19.58	19.98	19.50	19.95	19.64
July	20.47	20.84	20.14	20.85	20.49

December	19.98	20.40	19.70	20.38	19.20

New York, June 2.—The feature in the cotton market today was the first government crop report of the season, making the condition 69.6 compared with 66 last year year and 74.6, the ten-year average. There was further scattering liquidation or realizing before the reportw as published, and October contracts sold off to 19.95 on the appearance of the figures, but the market then almost immediately rallied on covering or rebuying by recent sellers.

Before the close October sold up to 20.60, or 65 points above the low level of the morning, and that delivery closed at 20.52 with the general market closing strong at a net advance of 31 to 39 points. The late advance was promoted by complaints of excessive rains in the eastern belt and firmness in the stock market, but local brokers said it looked as though people who had sold earlier in the week on a belief that low condition figures had been discounted had found comparatively few contracts for sale after the publication of the figures and had consequently turned to cover their commitments.

The market opened steady at an advance of 3 points to a decline of 5 points, and very soon eased off under local selling and renewed liquidation. Pressure increased somewhat as the hour for the government report approached, and immediately following its publication active months showed net losses of 18 to 31 points, with July selling at 20.15 and December at 19.80. There was trade buying at this decline which steadied the market and covering became urgent late in the afternoon with July selling up to 20.85 and December to 20.40 just before the close.

Bullish week-end figures contributed to the late strength which carried the price of October contracts back to within 25 points of Monday's high record. The first bale of the new Texas crop was reported at Houston this morning. Spinners' takings of American for the week were placed at 228,961 bales against 171,819 last year.

New York, June 2.—Spot cotton steady; middling 21.35.

SUBSTANTIAL GAINS IN NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, June 2.—Heavy trading and wide advances attended the issuance of the first crop condition report of the season in the cotton market today. The figures of 69.6 per cent of normal were somewhat above general expectations in this market and their immediate effect was to cause a drop of 32 to 53 points, but this break was what many bullish traders were looking for and their aggressive guying shot the market upward 60 to 80 points in a very few minutes. In the later trading the gains were widened so that December stood 103 points up from the lowest. At the highest levels prices were 39 to 43 points over the close of yesterday, with July at 20.55. The close was 34 to 39 points up net, with July at 20.50.

In the early trading it was a quiet market with narrow fluctuations. From net advances of 3 to 7 points there was a drop to net declines of 5 to 11 points. After the first rush of selling following the bureau report at 10 o'clock the market acted sold out and after the aggressive buying set in shorts became large buyers of covers.

The market was further strengthened in the late trading by the large mill takings for the week, 211,000 bales, according to Hester, against 151,000 this week last year. There was also more or less buying on reports of considerable rain in Texas and Oklahoma. Houston reported the first two bales of the new crop but, while this news was received with interest, it did not affect the trading. It was at first claimed that these receipts broke all records for first bales until it was shown that last year the first bale appeared on May 26. There will be no market here tomorrow, it being a legal holiday in observance of Confederate Memorial day.

New Orleans Spots.

New Orleans, June 2.—Spot cotton steady and unchanged. Sales on the spot 1,337 bales; to arrive 292. Low middling 19.00; middling 20.50; good middling 21.50. Receipts 2,409; stock 176,200.

THREE BURGLARIES REPORTED ON FRIDAY

Three burglaries occurred during Thursday night or early Friday morning, according to reports to detectives Friday.

The places entered were Southern Moline Plow company, 580 Whitehall street; B. F. Avery & Sons, 584 Whitehall street, and the Good Roads Machinery company, at 565 Whitehall street.

The thieves seemed to have centered their attention on the safes in all of these establishments. In the first two named places, all money had been removed and the safes left unlocked to prevent them being ruined by yeggmen. In the latter place the robbers were frightened away after they had filed the combination off and before they could effect an entrance into the vault.

Burglars entered the home of A. S. Robinson, 196 Wellington street, Friday night, and obtained a diamond ring and an entire outfit of men's clothing, according to a report made to the police department. Detectives Bentley and Satterfield were assigned to investigate the case.

NEW HIGHS ARE MADE IN VERY STRONG STOCK MARKET

Studebaker Features Trading, Advancing To New High Record

BY R. L. BARNUM,
Constitution's New York Financial Correspondent.

New York, June 2.—Today's stock market displayed remarkable strength with steel common, Studebaker, and a number of other shares making new high records for the year. Midvale was soft on the news that that company would head the merger with Inland and Republic, changing its name to the North American Steel company. Wall street can see why Republic and Inland can merger to advantage; but except for the purposes of marketing stock at the high prices now prevailing, compared with those of a few weeks ago, it is difficult to see why Midvale should be taken in.

Today's government cotton crop bears out the earlier estimates that this will be a year of a small cotton crop, the condition on May 25 being 69.6 against 66.0 a year ago, and the ten-year average of 74.6.

Money opened today at 5 per cent for call loans, the highest renewal rate since February 27, but funds attracted by the higher rate began to come in from out of town, and 4 1-2 was soon quoted. Following the advance in call money there was no 4 per cent time money, the rates being 4 1-4 to 4 1-2.

Mexican government bonds were strong today, with the conference beginning between Mexican government officials and bankers of this country, England and France to refund Mexico's past-due external bonded debt.

Sterling made a new high record for the year today at the opening, the quotation being $4.45 3-4. Today's high price was the highest in three years, or since the British government removed the "peg."

By far the most interesting news of the day, from Wall street's viewpoint, was the testimony of steel men given here before the Lockwood investigating committee, following the announcment of the merger of Republic, Midvale and Inland, which will have 10 per cent of the country's total ingot capacity. The Bethlehem-Lackawanna combination will have 10 per cent, while the United States Steel corporation has 45. Wall street takes it for granted that there will be just as close a working agreement between these three steel combinations, controlling over two-thirds of the country's ingot capacity, as the law will allow.

Gary's Testimony.

Wall street was especially interested in the matching of wits between the two experienced lawyers, Judge Gary, chairman of the steel corporation, and Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the lockwood committee. Gary denied stoutly that the Morgan firm ran the steel corporation or had the say in naming new directors although he admitted that J. P. Morgan named all of the old directors. Gary declared that he had more to do than anyone else in naming the new directors and that he and J. P. Morgan had disagreed only recently on the appointment of three new directors. Well informed Wall street agreed to take Mr. Gary at his word, but smilingly pointed out that he was probably mighty careful to name steel corporation directors who would be approved by Morgan.

As to the recent disagreement it was pointed out that the three new directors were George F. Baker, Jr., a close friend of J. P. Morgan's, W. P. Palmer, president of American Steel and Wire, a subsidiary company, and W. J. Filbert, who has been an officer of the steel corporation since its beginning.

Funds on Deposit.

No better evidence that the steel corporation is controlled by J. P. Morgan & company can be found than the fact disclosed today that the steel corporation has on deposit with the Morgan firm $8,000,000 cash for which it receives interest at the rate of 2.6 per cent, while this money is loaned out in the street on call by the Morgan firm.

For the last two or three years call money has not averaged less than 5 1-2 or 6 per cent and probably more, this difference being made by the Morgan firm. Untermyer asked Gary if he did not think it was a vicious practice for a corporation to lend money to a private banking firm to be loaned out on call at higher rates, but Gary would not admit that he knew what the Morgan firm did with the money.

As to whether or not the Morgan firm dominates the steel corporation which in turn dominates the steel trade A. C. Dinkey, president of Midvale, who was once president of Carnegie after it was taken over by the steel corporation, let the cat out of the bag while on the witness stand when Untermyer made him admit that "there would be a lot pleasanter and safer occupation than to buck up against the steel corporation with a merger that was not agreeable to J. P. Morgan &. Co."

Now or later, more will be heard of the testimony of the independent steel men being given before the Lockwood committee that the steel corporation is able to undersell them from $3 to $5 a ton largely because of the 1,000 miles of railroad owned by the steel corporation and that independents exist only by the grace of the steel corporation.

Reports Sales.

Montgomery Ward reports sales for May at $6,377,000 against $5,320,000 for the same period last year, an increase of 19.8 per cent. For the five months sales were $33,145,000 contrasted with $30,496,000 for the same months of 1921, an increase of 8.6 per cent.

Secretary Mellon announces that the offering of $200,000,000 3 1-2 per cent treasury certificates dated June 1 and maturing December 15, 1922, have all been sold. Total subscriptions amounted to $375,000,000, which, considering the low income return, is large.

Record Broken.

All sales, production and collection records were broken by Studebaker in May, according to President Erskine. He stated today that last month 14,000 cars were sold against 7,383 for the same month of 1921, that production was 10,883 cars, that collections were $17,000,000.

Failures reported during May throughout the United States by Bradstreet's numbered 1,803, which is a decrease of 7.4 per cent compared with April and a decrease of no less than 33.7 per cent contrasted with this January, which was a high record. Economists figure that a dozen important commodities are now at the top of the recovery from the low prices representing an advance of 15 per cent, this and increased buying through recovery of confidence accounts for the falling off in commercial failures during the month just closed.

Progress Seen.

Armour & Co., in reviewing general conditions finds that last month the country traveled a long distance on the road to stability with the 10 per cent cut in freight rates ordered, the most important progressive influence. It is estimated that the country will save $400,000,000 through the rate reduction, probably more than a quarter of that saving going to the farming communities. And right now anything that helps the farmers financial condition is bound to help business. Prospects for increased rural wealth are among leading factors beginning to dispel gloom of business depression."

Corporative financing for May was $400,700,000 against $177,637,000 for May of 1922, with the feature public utility financing which reached $145,431,000 against $37,400,000 a year ago.

New York, June 2.—Trading in bonds today was mixed and uncertain throughout the session, but the investment situation retained all of its recent strength, as evidenced by the speedy sale of the republic of Bolivia $24,000,000 loan and several other new underwritings.

Liberty bonds were active but realizing sales in that division detracted from their strength, all but two of the entire series closing unchanged, or at slight reactions. British loans failed to reflect the further strength of sterling exchange and French offerings were relatively dull. Mexican government 4s lost 1 point, while the 5s were firm to strong, with Havana Electric 5s, Brazil 8s, Denmark 8s, Netherlands 6s and Japanese 4s.

The strongest feature among domestic bonds was Peoria and Eastern income 4s, which rose 3½ points to the accompaniment of the higher price quoted for the common stock. Chesapeake and Ohio 4½s, New Haven 3½s, Pennsylvania 7s and St. Louis and San Francisco incomes also were higher, but most underlying rails and industrials were irregular. Total sales, par value, $16,875,000.

Subpoenas Used to Bring Steel Merger Agreements Before Lockwood Probers

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER
United News Staff Correspondent.

New York, June 2.—Investigation of the proposed $250,000,000 steel merger here is being pressed by the Lockwood committee on the theory that a group of big Wall street figures are playing a gigantic game for the purpose of milking the public through manipulation of prices on the stock market, it was learned late Friday.

The investigation, being conducted by Samuel Untermyer, as counsel, has stirred Wall street and sent big financial operators scurrying to cover.

Untermyer is now trying to force the steel magnates to disclose their agreement with Kuhn, Loeb & Co., one of the largest houses in Wall street, who have been selected to float the stock for the new merger corporation. He is trying to learn whether, as has been suggested in some quarters, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., were to be allowed to get their payment for floating the new stock through manipulation of it on the market. So far Untermyer has been unable to find that any fixed commission arrangement was made by the steel men for paying the banking house. All that could be learned during the day's inquiry Friday was that Kuhn, Loeb & Co. were to raise $20,000,000 cash on stock in connection with the financing of the combine.

Handicapped by the unwillingness of the men involved to appear for examination, Untermyer finally got subpoenas ordering Thomas L. Chadbourne, lawyer, who prepared the papers in the merger, and J. A. Topping, of the Republic Iron and Steel company, to appear before him Saturday with a copy of the agreement made with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. for floating the stock sale to the public.

The complicated game which is being played behind the scenes makes one of the most fascinating chapters in the history of high finance in Wall street.

Speculators on the curb market were buying and selling the new merger stock, "if and when issued" at around 51, and this in the face of the fact that no one, except the small group of outsiders, knows how much stock will be issued.

Uses Subpoena.

Untermyer's effort to get at the inside story of the big deal, developed some comic aspects. He telephoned Thomas L. Chadbourne, who was in his office at 14 Wall street, to come to the hearing room in the city hall, a few blocks away, at once. Chadbourne said he was "too busy." Then Untermeyer asked Topping to come and tell what he knew about the deal. Topping said his wife was sailing for Europe Saturday and he could not come until Monday. Untermyer hastily got a subpoena.

Twenty minutes later Topping was on the witness stand, perspiring under the rough questioning of the dapper Mr. Untermeyer, who wore the customary orchid in his buttonhole.

Delay Asked.

"Did you bring the agreement with Kuhn, Loeb and Co.?" Untermeyer asked.

"No, I didn't know you wanted that," Topping said.

"Well, this committee will wait until you go and get it," Untermyer announced. "Now you go right down to Mr. Chadbourne's office and get it. We'll wait here until you get back."

Fifteen minutes later Topping telephoned from Chadbourne's office asking if it would be all right to appear Saturday morning. Untermyer consented to this.

Dinkey Recalled.

A. C. Dinkey, of the Midvale Co., was previously put through a hot cross-examination. He had been on the stand Thursday and denied any knowledge of the merger plans. An hour after he left the stand, the newspaper men were given a statement outlining the steel merger plans in full. This made Nntermyer angry and he retailiated with a most grilling fire of questions Friday when Dinkey was recalled to the stand.

"Why didn't you tell me about the arrangement when I asked you yesterday?" Untermyer asked.

"I didn't know anything definte about it," Dinkey replied.

Untermyer declared later that the committee was "not to be trifled with" and that he believed the steel officials were "not telling the facts."

Others May Enter.

Previously, when Judge Gary, of the U. S. Steel corporation, was on the stand, Untermyer tried to show that J. P. Morgan & Co. controlled the U. S. Steel corporation and that this concern really controlled the entire steel industry, permitting the smaller independents to exist only by suffrance. This line of questioning was based on the admission of witnesses that the U. S. Steel corporation could put out steel at $3 to $5 a ton less than the smaller concerns.

Only three companies are understood to have entered the merger thus far, Midvale, Republic Iron and Steel and Inland. Bethlehem and Lackawanna may come in later according to gossip in the street.

Stock Letter.

New York, June 2.—(Special.)—We still believe that the independent oil shares are headed for higher prices. Pools are at work in most of them, and they are having relatively good success in attracting a following which is quite willing to believe that the advance in the oil shares is not being rashly overdone, and we think that in the case of sound producing and refining companies this is quite true. Cosden is particularly well bought and has started an advance which, with the continuance of present market conditions, should carry the stock through the 50 level.

At last the RBC and MV merger is officially announced, but it is almost impossible to arrive at anything but most tentative conclusions as to where MV and RBC shares have overdiscounted, speculatively, the potential values of the shares of the new company. At first glance it would seem as if RBC shareholders have fared relatively well.

The rise in call money yesterday caused considerable hesitation, but it does not appear as if this tightening in money rates is anything but temporary, and we do not believe it to be indicative of any change in the general trend of money rates.—Doremus, Daniel & Co.

Cotton Letters.

The opening of our market was featureless, with small lots bought and sold on evening up transactions before the bureau. The government report as issued at 12 noon represented a condition of 69.6 as of May 25. No estimated acreage increase was given out. The report was as expected. Wall street sold immediately after the bureau, but the market was well supported by commission house and southern buying, which advanced the market about 50 points over the low of the day. The south seemed a little disappointed at the high figures, and hesitated about buying after the first hour this afternoon. We must not lose sight of the fact that the May condition is the best in over three years, and the south will not be so willing to buy cotton, and it may temporarily ease up the demand. But considering the report generally we do not think it foreshadows the amount of cotton necessary to reach the world's needs unless the weather becomes excellent and ravage of the boll weevil ceases to some extent.—Hubbard Bros. & Co.

Business Gain Continues, Says Dun's Bulletin

New York, June 2.—Dun's tomorrow will say:

"Another month has opened with recent gains in business maintained, and with promise of further improvement to follow. Current reports from different trades and sections of the country give rise to confident expectations, and support the more general belief that recovery from previous depression has definitely developed.

"Revival in some basic lines this year has steadily gathered momentum, despite various drawbacks, and idleness among workers has appreciably diminished with the increased opportunities for employment. Labor troubles at the coal mining and textile fields, continuing for many weeks, have tended to prevent a full measure of progress, but the position of most industries is distinctly stronger, and production records indicate that operations are more closely approaching capacity.

POWELL'S ATTACK WARMLY SCORED

Hotel Ansley and men of varied professions and avocations invited so that he might get the testimony of the whole people. There were present Judge Hiram Warner Hill, of the supreme court; Judges Humphries and Hutcheson, of the superior court; Ex-Governor Dorsey, Mayor Key, of Atlanta; Ex-Mayor Pierpont, of Savannah; M. L. Thrower, W. S. Witham, Chief of Police Beavers, Sheriff Jones, of the Anti-Saloon league, and myself. Without exception, every one of these well-known men of unquestioned integrity gave testimony of the beneficial effect of prohibition in Georgia. Governor Dorsey said he had lived in and near Atlanta since the saloon days and he remembered when saloons existed, then local option, then state prohibition with locker clubs, then doing away with the locker clubs, then the "bone-dry" law, then national prohibition, and every advance step made conditions better.

"Some utterances can never be explained except by taking into consideration the viewpoint of the one who makes them. Some years ago before we had prohibition in Georgia a party was going to Florida to spend the winter and they had a two-hour wait in Atlanta. The women and children of the party remained in the waiting room at the old carshed (Union station now), but the two men went out for a walk on the streets. They came back and each, not in the presence of the other, commented on Atlanta. One, a minister, said 'I found the Salvation army having a genuinely spiritual meeting on the streets, and I felt my heart stirred when I stopped and listened to the testimony of the rough men who had been reached by the work of these people with their tambourines. The Salvation Army makes a lot of noise, but how much good they are doing! There are so many good things going on in Atlanta, anyway.'

Saw Drunken Men.

"The other man, not a Christian, said: 'I went out and saw drunken men on the streets; this place is full of gambling dens. I tell you, Atlanta is a bad place. I wouldn't live here for anything.'

"As to prohibition being the cause of the lawlessness and crime and general disrespect for law—this is absurd and any thinking person knows it is. We should rather lift our hearts, to God in thankfulness that we have prohibition at this time following the world war. Any war creates the spirit of lawlessness, and we tremble to think what our state would be without prohibition at this time.

"Judge Powell's speech is a reminder to the temperance forces that our work is not finished, and that a vast educational campaign on the subject of the effect of alcohol should be continued. The final question is not whether prohibition is prohibiting, it is whether it ought to prohibit, and when it does not, it is somebody's fault. Another fact is that prohibition reveals law-breakers, it does not make them."

Colonel Mercer's Statement.

Colonel Mercer's letter to Judge Powell was as follows:

Thousands of people in Georgia have read with astonishment, your very powerful speech before the bar association this week—powerful in its destructive influence on the public welfare. I cannot understand unless, possibly, your association with that "quasi criminal class," that makes up the personnel of the club life of our cities, is responsible for your blunder in this very serious matter. You are not informed, because I know that you are honest and there can be but two reasons.

Every informed man knows that only crass ignorance of the real truth about prohibition can save you from the charge of willingness to humor the most dangerous of the lawless elements in this country, the bootlegger.

Every lawbreaker will take courage from your utterance. I wish I could tell you how I regret that you did not see fit to use your talents to a better purpose.

The lawbreaker will carry the published report of your speech in his pocket, reserving another pocket for the pistol he is encouraged by your language to use on the first officer of the law who attempts to interfere with his "constitutional right" to violate the constitution of his country, your country, and mine.

Let's see how miserably you fell down. You say: "Prohibition absolutely in force would have some economic compensations," whereas the truth is, undisputed, and indisputable, that prohibition, enforced as at present, has tremendous economic compensations. You should have said that or left the other unsaid in the name of truth, out of respect for the facts of history known to all men.

Entail Moral Loss.

You say it would entail moral loss to enforce prohibition, when you might have said, with greater accuracy and equal force, that it is nonenforcement that entails the moral loss.

You spoke patronizingly of light wines and beer as a modification of an intemperate law, when you should know that that is a subterfuge propagated by the whisky interest who want a return of the saloon, who see in it a complete debacle of the prohibition movement. You reiterate that the present prohibition law is ruining the morals of this nation. You could have afforded to have been more exact and stated that the failure of those in high places, positions of vantage in society and business, and in the professions, not omitting the profession of law, to stand squarely by the constitutional law of the land, state and federal statutes, is ruining the morals of this nation by such failure to support the law. Nonenforcement is directly chargeable to such utterances as yours at Tybee, in the courts, and out of them. Too many sorry-white-men-at-the-bar are constantly guilty of that crime against the constitution they swear to protect.

Worst of all, dear Arthur, is your treasonable language, "How can any lover of law and liberty feel any deep regret when he reads that some officer has been killed by some bootleggr, and then reads further that the officer was committing a plain, palpable violation of the bootleggers' constitutional rights by attempting to search him and his home or to seize him or his automobile on suspicion and without a warrant." That utterance is a clear intimation to every lawbreaker to shoot down the officer of the law. It is entirely unworthy of you.

Rights of Bootleggers.

You dwell on the bootleggers' constitutional rights, when you know that an outlaw has no constitutional rights that others are bound to respect. Legally he has a standing before the courts, but he cannot put himself outside the pale of the law and clamor for "his constitutional rights."

Your reference to "those who bear the name of judge" is entirely beside the mark. You take position at the wrong end of the bull. The judge who really plays to the grandstand, and the votes therein, is the judge who plays with the law by the application of nominal fines where only prison sentences can create a wholesome respect for the law.

You say that liquor has its uses. The medical profession does not agree. The doctors would be practically unanimous against its use if the drunkards and bootleggers among them could be eliminated. Possibly there are uses in society with which I am not familiar.

You say we have impaired its uses and left ourselves a prey to the abuses.

Dr. Frank Crane said just before you had your say at Tybee, that in society "they are still shaking cocktails and smuggling highballs. In club corners and at society dinners they are still entertaining each other with the common assertion that the present state of things cannot continue." "They are humiliated by bootlegger autocracy and tired of paying enormous sums for inferior drinks." That, possibly, is your complaint when you say that its uses have been seriously impaired.

Sowing Dragon's Teeth.

Arthur, you were sowing dragon's teeth at Tybee, sowing them in Georgia soil, and when you are riding along our public roads in the future you will see the crop that has been harvested by the officers who have escaped playing the part of the victim in the homicides you encourage when the "bootleggers' constitutional rights" were being invaded. Your dragon's teeth, our harvest.

I am so firm a believer in public opinion that I believe that it does support prohibition, as the greatest moral movement since Christ walked on the earth, and that same faith leads me to conclude that your inexplicable stand on this great question will fail of the approval of the best thought of the state and the country.

As a federal officer I have been in every one of the 160 counties of the state since prohibition, state and federal, became effective, and discussed it with the people in each county, and I know that they wanted prohibition when they got it and want it yet.

I am no more interested in the enforcement of the prohibition law than in the observance of other laws. All of our laws are being treated contemptuously, encouraged by lawyers, such as may have indorsed you at Tybee. In support of that contention I quote the American Bar association: "The trouble is largely with the members of the bar themselves. Many men practicing law today, the committee has been told, ought to be in jail, instead."

There are other misleading statements in your references to prohibition that would require time and space to enumerate.

I deplore it all for your sake and the great harm it will do.

Sincerely,

JESSE E. MERCER.

Four Participants In School Fight Acquitted Friday

Four men charged with disorderly conduct in connection with a free-for-all fight which broke up a meeting of the Inman Park Parent-Teacher association last Friday night were acquitted Friday by Acting Recorder A. W. Calloway, after he had found it impossible to obtain evidence to show definitely just who was responsible for beginning the fight. Those tried were R. M. Mitchell, 36 years old, of 48 Waddell street; John F. Pate, 40, of 135 Hill street; C. H. Terry, 38, of 38 Spring street, and S. J. Warner, 60, of 22 Dixie avenue.

The trial attracted a large crowd of spectators who were deeply interested in the case. The evidence was of such a conflicting nature that the recorder was unable to determine who was the aggressor in the fight. Several sharp tilts between lawyers and witnesses marked the trial.

All witnesses testified that the fight started when Pate attempted to read a resolution which he offered as a substitute for a resolution introduced at the meeting of the association extending sympathy to Miss Nell Gatins, principal of the school, who has been ill. The substitute resolution contained matter condemning Catholic teachers in the school for their alleged failure to read the Bible in the school. All other evidence relating to who was the first to strike a blow and the circumstances surrounding the beginning of the fight were conflicting.

The defendants, Mitchell and Pate, were represented by Attorney Joe Norris, while Warner and Terry were represented by Attorney Pete Daley. Assistant City Attorney Jesse O. Wood was present to represent the city.

John S. Moore, of 20 Ashland avenue, one of the witnesses, testified that the meeting was not arranged as a business meeting but was a social affair. He said the introduction of the resolution was not included in the program and the meeting was held for the "daddies" of the children of the school.

Emory to Open Her Law School Doors to Women

Hereafter it will be possible for women to attend the Emory university law school. A rule adopted several years ago by the board of trustees which barred students in the law department was abolished Friday at the annual meeting of the Emory board of trustees.

Other important matters at the session of trustees were the election of officers and the hearing of various reports from school officials on the institution's activities during the year just closing.

Asa G. Candler was re-elected chairman of the board. Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, of Huntington, W. Va., was elected vice president of the board to succeed Dr. John C. Kilgo, whose illness prevented his further serving as vice president.

To succeed Walker White, who has been made superintendent of the new Wesley Memorial hospital, Professor A. S. Johnson, who has been acting assistant treasurer, was elected treasurer, W. D. Thompson, Atlanta attorney, was re-elected secretary.

Asks Reconsideration Of Senate Extension Of Charters of Banks

Washington, June 3.—The senate at the request of Senator King, democrat, Utah, an opponent of the measure, today asked the house to return the bill extending for 99 years the life of charters of national banks. Action was taken on the bill by the senate during Mr. King's absence, he said, and he asked that it be recalled, announcing he would seek reconsideration of the vote by which it was passed.

Biggest Business Offers Partnership

World-Wide Chain of Branch-Offices Gives Opportunity to All

(The following is issued by the committee on church co-operation.)

You are offered a partnership.

The Standard Oil company, its owners will admit, is small in comparison with the firm, which makes the offer.

What nonsense is this? Not nonsense, but truth, now being brought from beneath the rubbish of hypocrisy and cant, which has been piled about such words as "brotherhood," "co-operation," and "fellowship."

The world, if not the universe, is the battle ground for business between two great firms. God is the senior partner of one. Of the other, Satan. And each of us, man or woman, must be a partner of one of the other firm.

Kipling's thought, in "The Soul of Tomlinson," that some folk are so utterly useless and worthless in their do nothing lives, that neither Heaven nor hell will have them, may appeal. There is nothing to it. The greatest stock in trade of Devil & Co., is "doing nothing," just as its opposite, "love," drawing men up and together, and driving them to work for the good of others, is that of the firm, whose head is God.

Of which house are you a member?

Where do we get the idea of a partnership?

As the stone, rejected by the builders, was finally brought to light and used—as the law, lost beneath the accumulated temple trash of years, was found again, "fellowship" is being discovered anew.

Don't shy at the word. To some, it will recall only a line of mournful looking men filing by another and solemnly shaking his hand, with the word, "I give you the right hand of fellowship." Others will recall rituals of secret orders. A few may remember the ceremonial of a chuch disciplining a disorderly member, from whom it was declared, "Fellowship has been withdrawn."

But fellowship is more than form and solemn ceremony.

Your Chance in Life.

Fellowship, the Century dictionary says, is a "mutual association of persons on equal and friendly terms"—"the state or condition of sharing in common; intimate association; joint interest partnership."

The word, "fellow," is made of two words, "fee," which means property, and "law," which at first meant, "a laying down." Your fellow, originally was one, who laid his property down by yours for use together, a partner.

The day of "the flaming tongues," when for the first time we see the church, as we know it, in action, Peter's sermon won 3,000 people, of whom it is said:

"They devoted themselves to the instruction given by the apostles and to fellowship, breaking bread and praying together.

"The believers all kept together. They shared all they had with one another, they would sell their posessions and goods and distribute the proceeds among all, as anyone might be in need. Day after day they resorted with one accord to the temple and broke bread together in their own homes: They ate with a glad and simple heart, praising God and looked on with favor by all the people."

With this picture of fellowship before you, hear Paul saying:

"Faithful is the God who called you to this fellowship with his Son Jesus Christ our Lord."

Have you accepted this call to become a partner with Him?

Jesus says:

"I tell you another thing: If two of you agree on earth about anything you pray for, it will be done for you by my Father in Heaven. For where two or three have gathered in my name, I am there among them."

Begins at Home.

Try this promise in your home.

That problem bearing down upon you and your wife, or upon your husband and you—perhaps it's the boy, maybe the daughter; possibly not the children, but only the daily grind, or the monthly bills—whatever it is, think it out together, agree, and lay the whole thing before your Father in Heaven, remembering, Christ is there with you in your home.

Do this in store, or office, or factory, on the farm, or in whatever place, or group, you may be called to work, and expect and watch results.

The same method faithfully followed would disclose the way out of every personal difficulty, and solve every problem in business or industry, and in the lives of our city, our state, our nation, and the nations of the world.

Dr. Jowett, recently speaking in London, voiced the growing belief of increasing thousands, when he said:

"I believe that a vital fellowship of enthusiastic Christians of Europe and America could change the face of the world."

No longer is "fellowship" merely a fine sounding word, used only in meetings of little groups of people, who, secretly dismayed and disheartened at the fewness of their numbers, rightfully take comfort in praying. "Thou hast promised, 'where two or three have gathered in my name, I am there.'"

Fellowship, this partnership with Jesus, we are beginning to see, means infinitely more than this, or other formal gatherings, small or great, in church buildings, lodge rooms, or wherever they may be. From the least incident to the greatest event in life, all belong within the realm of the fellowship with Christ.

Tests Our Honesty.

John wrote:

"That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you also, that you may have fellowship with us, and our fellowship is with the Father and with His son, Jesus Christ.

"If we say that we have fellowship with Him and walk in the darkness, we lie and do not know the truth; but if we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship with one another, and the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin."

Are we speaking the truth when we claim fellowship with Him?

"God is light." "God is love." Love is light. Of love, Paul said:

"Love is very patient, very kind. Love knows no jealousy; makes no parade, gives itself no airs, is never rude, never selfish, never irritated, never resentful; love is never glad when others go wrong, love is gladdened by goodness, always slow to expose, always eager to believe the best always hopeful, always patient. Love never disappears."

If you are very patient and kind—if you are not jealous—if you make no parade, give yourself no airs, and are never rude, selfish, irritated or resentful—if you find no pleasure in seeing others fall, and are always glad to see the goodness of others—if you are ever slow to speak of the mistakes or follies of friends, neighbors, or strangers, you being always eager to believe the best, and steadily hopeful and patient—if you are never missing in the hour of your fellow's need—

If you are all of these, then you are walking in the light.

Life would be happier, misery practically banished from earth, if the more than half billion people who, by bearing the name Christian, claim fellowship, partnership with one another and with Christ, would thus walk in the light. Poverty would disappear. Criminal and divorce courts would close for lack of business. Strikes would be impossible. War would be unknown. The Kingdom of God would have come.

Shall we not agree, and work and pray for this, pleading the Master's promise?

Our homes and places of work will become branch offices of Heaven, when we begin to "walk in the light as He is in the light," as we must do, if we have "fellowship with Him," and with one another.

Why not begin today at home?

WE ASK THE CO-OPERATION of the people of Atlanta to help the poor of the city. Give us the accumulation of waste material from your homes, such as magazines, newspapers, books, old clothes (for men, women and children); furniture, bedding, carpets, stoves, crockery, rubbers, shoes and old iron or anything you don't want. We collect, sort and repair this waste, and then sell it to the worthy poor for a trifling sum, thus enabling them to supply their needs at a price within their means. In this manner, we believe we are aiding them in retaining their self-respect in place of fostering pauperism by giving the material away indiscriminately.

Shriners Leave for San Francisco Tonight

YAARAB TEMPLE ORIENTAL BAND

Shriners Send Shetland Pony To Big Meeting

While Yaarab temple's double steel train caravan for the pilgrimage to San Francisco and the Imperial council meeting of the Mystic Shrine is not due to leave Atlanta until 7:30 o'clock this evening, the first of the delegation has already started.

Because no one connected with the Oriental band would consent to act as valet to Tiny, the diminutive Shetland pony that pulls Doc Wilson and the triangular bass drum of the Oriental outfit, thus qualifying it for a berth or stall or something on one of the trains, President Len Baldwin called upon the tom-tom beaters and swinette manipulators to kick in on the expense of sending Tiny to San Francisco by express.

So Tiny left Friday night in a crate; she will break the journey and nibble hay at San Antonio until the caravan catches up, then after the parade in San Antonio will go hence to Los Angeles while the nobility and ladies are saying: "Oh, how perfectly magnificent!" at the Grand Canyon, then she will beat them into Frisco. How she will get back this Disseminator of Sacred Bull has not been informed.

Yaarab's two special trains are now on a sidetrack near the Terminal station, and the Atlanta and West Point has a couple of locomotives all dressed up in Shrine colors, preparatory to the start at 7:30 this evening.

Potentate Gibson was deserted at the last moment by Chief Rabban Charles Bowen and Recorder George Argard, and that just about wipes out the list of members of the official divan who contemplated making the trip; but he will be anciently and Orientally attended by Past Potenate Henry C. Heinz, Captain F. E. Van der Veer and Noble Ralph McClelland, imperial representatives; and Past Potentate Forrest Adair, who is a life representative and secretary of the board of trustees of the Shriners' Crippled Children's hospitals, will be in San Francisco when the caravan arrives. He is making the trip direct in order to attend a meeting of the trustees in advance of the Imperial council sessions, and with Mrs. Adair will join the imperial party that will accompany "Sunny Jim" McCandless, the new Imperial potentate, to his home in Honolulu.

Yaarab's four organizations, the band, patrol, chanters and Oriental band, will accompany the caravan, two being on each train, and at many of the stops will perform for the entertainment of the public that gathers to bid them welcome, and inasmuch as every one of Yaarab's organizations is top notch in its respective line, Yaarab and Atlanta will be well advertised throughout the 7,600 miles of the long trip.

Besides the officers and members of the organizations there will be a large number of nobles and ladies in the caravan, which is the largest delegation of any kind that has ever left Atlanta.

Macon Shriners Coming.

Macon, Ga., June 2.—(Special.) With a full crew of Shriners in charge of the train, the imperial potentate's special train to the annual meeting of the imperial council, is due to pull out of Macon at 2:45 o'clock tomorrow morning en route to the San Francisco convention. The route from Macon goes via Columbus and Birmingham over the Central of Georgia and thence to St. Louis over the Illinois Central.

From Macon to Columbus, Conductor E. R. Layfield, a Shriner and member of Macon city council, will be in charge of the train. At Columbus a specially painted and decorated engine is waiting to pull the special through to Birmingham. The two baggage cars bear the names of Alee and Al Sihah temples.

Tonight, J. Walter Collins, in charge of local arrangements, said that all available space had been taken.

In addition to sixty or seventy Macon nobles and their friends, the entire patrol and band of Al Sihah temple will be aboard the special and act as an escort to Imperial Potentate E. A. Cutts.

SUN WINS BATTLE AND FAIR WEATHER WILL REIGN TODAY

Old Man Sun plowed a path through clouds that had hedged him off the face of the earth for about 72 hours yesterday afternoon and continued on duty until it came time for him to retire. Also——

The weather expert for this vicinity has issued an official communication stating that it "will be fair today" for Atlanta and other vicinities in Georgia. All of which indicates that the wet session prevailing for the last several days is broken—temporarily, at any rate.

The weather man, in official card, Friday also gave a short history of the storm just ending. It was central Thursday, he said, over southeastern Alabama and moved slowly northward over western Georgia to the vicinity of Asheville, N. C., where it was central Friday morning. Heavy rains occurred in Georgia and Alabama and general rains over the cotton states east of the Mississippi river. Showers also occurred on the middle Rocky mountain slope, but the weather remained fair in Texas.

Temperatures have remained moderate. There is a reasonable prospect, the official concludes, for fair weather, with sunshine, today and probably tomorrow.

HARDING TO SIGN RESERVE ACT BILL

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, June 2.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—President Harding will sign the federal reserve act amendment bill, recently passed by congress, and will retain Governor Harding as the head of the board, according to information received at the white house today.

Main feature of the legislation include provisions restricting building costs construction, offered by Senator Harris, of Georgia; increasing the membership of the federal reserve board from seven to eight members, and a classic recommendation that for the additional member the president appoint a "dirt farmer."

Failure of the president to sign the bill promptly was due to a typographical error, involving some minor construction which might have been imposed, it was explained.

When questioned as to the reappointment of Governor W. P. G. Harding, whose term expires in July, as head of the board, the president stated that in all likelihood the present head would be retained, with the extra member going to a representative of the farm group.

MAN IS BADLY BEATEN BY CROWD OF BOYS

Ernest Laughter, 597 East Fair street, was called from his home shortly after 9 o'clock Friday night by a crowd of boys and was severely beaten by them, one of the boys striking him in the mouth with an empty bottle, he reported to the police last night.

Laughter went to Grady hospital where his wounds were dressed. He told the police he had no idea what was the motive of the attack.

He furnished the police with a description of the boys and an investigation is being made by detectives.
